Soviet Troops Said Moving Into Slovakia

VIENNA (Reuters)—Strong rumors were current in Budapest today that during the last 10 days there has been a considerable movement of Russian troops from Hungary to Czechoslovakia.

It was believed that these movements had something to do with the visit of Russian leaders Nikita Khrushchev and Nikolai Bulganin to Czechoslovakia.

Travellers reaching Vienna from Budapest said there was no official confirmation of the rumors. But villagers in Komárom reported having seen Russian troops crossing into Czechoslovakia there last week.

Railroad tickets to Czechoslovakia have not been sold by the Hungarian state travel agency for the last week and no visas for Czechoslovakia have been issued.

Khrushchev and Bulganin have been on a tour of the Czech hinterlands for the last few days urging dissident Slovaks to work in closer harmony with the Communist regime.

WANT AUTONOMY
No Western reporters were permitted on the three-day trip aimed at soothing restive elements in the province of Slovakia which have been demanding autonomy within the Czech state—a status they had during the German occupation.

The predominantly Roman Catholic Slovaks have made no secret of their bitterness against the Czechs who control the country and monopolize the government jobs.

Prague radio reported the arrival of Khrushchev and Bulganin in Bratislava Friday and said Khrushchev called on the Slovaks to "recognize the brotherly aid of the Czechs."

"Slovakia was a poor country and ranked among the most backward in Europe, forcing many Slovaks to leave their homes in order to seek their bread abroad," the Soviet Communist party chief said.

Canadian Record
HAMILTON (CP)—Gordon Dickson of Hamilton Olympic Club smashed the Canadian native six-mile record today, covering the distance in 30 minutes, 21.6 seconds.

Jet Pilot Wings Home To Kill Wife's Visitor
OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—An air national guard pilot, who flew his F-80 jet fighter home from Wyoming to trap a man who had been annoying his wife, shot and killed an air force sergeant who entered the pilot's home Friday night.

Lieut. Leo J. Canavan, 21, sprang from his wife's bedroom after the sergeant, Donald Clark Ohmann, stationed at Tinker air force base, entered the living room. Canavan shot Ohmann four times with a .22 calibre pistol.

Canavan had been granted emergency leave from his Casper, Wyo. encampment.
Canavan's wife, Emilie, 19, had camp.

Three Strikers Injured

Heavy Rain Toll Rises In Chicago

CHICAGO (UP)—Chicago area residents counted up a heavy toll of property damage and a rising death list today from over a half-foot of rain.

More showers were forecast for the waterlogged area.

Deaths from accidents resulting from Friday night's torrential downpour rose to five and possibly six in the area, extending to suburbs north, south and west.

A seven-month-old baby drowned in her south-side basement apartment. A news vendor, 60, was found drowned in his apartment, also in a basement.

Overworked police and firemen struggled to clear roads of stalled vehicles. Some roads and highways were under water throughout the night.

Illinois Bell Telephone reported 20,000 phones out of commission in Chicago and 2,000 out in the suburbs.

Telephone company officials estimate $1,000,000 damage to equipment. Most of the damage came at midway airport where a bay "tidal wave" surged into the telephone equipment room in the basement of the terminal building.

Water was said to have been eight feet deep. Pumps labored all night, but only managed to keep even with the rising waters.

Civil Service Group Queries Agreement
VANCOUVER (CP)—The agreement which averted a strike of British Columbia's 12,000 civil servants has raised protests from some members of the B.C. Government Employees' Association.

About 2,000 employees at Esson-dale and Woodlands School are querying a few of the points which Premier Bennett and the association agreed on Wednesday.

They have hired the Queen's Park Arena at New Westminster to hear "explanations" by association leaders.

Alfred Bennett, BCGEA assistant secretary, said Friday night a group of members was "apparently a little concerned about the retro-active pay clause, and about the fact that the government is not prepared to pay any more money right away."

The association's original demands were that any increase should be retroactive to April 1, but the government insisted on July 1. The association also wanted the 7½ per cent increase to be granted immediately, but the government said it must be approved by the legislature.

"Those weren't big enough issues on which to call a strike," said Mr. Bennett.

'GONE FISHING' SIGN HUNG UP BY JOHN D.
OTTAWA (CP)—Summer holidays appear to be almost entirely out of the picture for the new Progressive Conservative cabinet.

A canvass of ministers' offices shows that, except for Prime Minister Diefenbaker, none of the cabinet has any holiday plans.

Diefenbaker, in Calgary today to attend the stampede, will have nine days of rest at his Prince Albert, Sask., home and at a fishing camp at Lac la Ronge in northern Saskatchewan.

It will provide his first extended period of relaxation in six months of strenuous activity.

Sailor Dies in Crash Against Rock Bluff

DEATH TRUCK MANGLED

Royal Canadian Navy truck written off as total loss was wrecked near Langford early today, killing driver PO Roy Bernard Drysdale, Vancouver recruiting officer who was on his way home. Police said Trans-Canada Highway was dry at the time and could offer no explanation for the accident.

Recruiting Officer Meets Sudden Death In Langford Mishap

A naval recruiting officer, PO Roy Bernard Drysdale, 34, was killed when his panel truck left Trans-Canada Highway near Langford and smashed into a rock outcropping at about 2.45 a.m. today.

His death brought to eight the number of traffic fatalities in Greater Victoria since Jan. 1 and was the third since June 15.

PO Drysdale, 2475 Wall, Vancouver, was travelling alone, apparently driving north on his way back to Vancouver after a two-week stretch of duty here.

Colwood RCMP said the truck evidently left the highway on a straightaway about a mile north of Thetis overpass, and was wrecked when it collided with the outcropping at the side of the highway.

Apparently Drysdale was thrown from the vehicle.

Police said the accident was witnessed by a Victoria man in another car who was heading for Campbell River on holiday.

Langford ambulance attended and took the man to St. Joseph's Hospital emergency where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Body was taken to McCall's Funeral Home, which will announce arrangements.

Drysdale leaves a widow, Elaine, in Vancouver.

The navy here said the petty officer was taking a navy recruiting van back to Vancouver.

Accident occurred on a stretch of highway about a quarter mile south of Millstream cutoff.

Coroner Dr. E. C. Hart said an inquest likely will be held, but decision was being reserved until Monday.

Bayer Leads Canadian Golf Into Last Nine

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—George Bayer of Los Angeles held to a three-stroke lead in the final round today of the Canadian Open golf tournament when he headed into the last nine.

Closest after 63 holes were Doug Ford of Mahopac, N.Y., and Bo Winger of Odessa, Texas, each with 240.

Pat Schwab of Dayton, Ohio, and Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., each had 241.

Bayer started the final round with 202 and Ford with 206.

Bill Casper of Bonita, Calif., with 205 for 54 holes, took 37 going out, to par 35 by Bayer and a 34 by Ford, and had amassed 242 strokes. He was tied with Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, who shot a 34.

Bill Mawhinney and Lyle Crawford, both of Vancouver, finished with identical scores of 288. Each had a 72 in the final round.

VITAL U.S. TARGETS SMASHED

47 Million 'Ravaged' In Mock Air Attack

OPERATION ALERT (AP)—Officials estimated today that areas in which 35,521,526 persons—more than half the population of the United States—live were theoretically ravaged by mock "enemy" bombs in Operation Alert 1957.

At least 191 vital U.S. targets were smashed by a presumed enemy who swept across the North Pole Friday with super-sonic bombers carrying H-bombs.

The make-believe nuclear onslaught was a test of the nation's civil defence and mobilization organizations.

PRAYER FOR TODAY.
Almighty God, who has brought us to the season of warmth and growth, of relaxation and rejuvenation, grant by constant impulse of Your presence that we may not make of our opportunities for pleasure occasions for indulgence, or make our hours of leisure times of self-destroying indolence. Amen.

Gangland Murder Feared in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Provincial and city police today investigated the disappearance of a 36-year-old Montrealer of Romanian descent on the theory he may have been a victim of an underworld killing.

Six-foot Larry Petrov, awaiting trial on a narcotics charge, was last seen July 2. Wednesday his parents told police they were alarmed because Petrov seldom was absent more than 24 hours without advising them of his whereabouts.

Police said Petrov's parents also reported they had received in the mail two photographs of their son each marked with a big X.

Dulles Visit Shows U.S. Concern Over Firm Stand by Tory Chief

OTTAWA (BUP)—The advertised visit of U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles is being widely interpreted here, and with quiet satisfaction as evidence that Prime Minister Diefenbaker's policy of closer Commonwealth ties has stirred up some uneasiness in Washington.

It goes without saying that the new Conservative ministry will give Dulles a cordial and a distinguished reception, for the shift in emphasis from Washington to London as the more desirable cornerstone of Canadian trade and foreign policy doesn't envisage any by-product of coolness in Canada's North American relations.

On the contrary, the Conservative government's conception is that closer Commonwealth co-operation should leave Ottawa-Washington relations as fundamental and as vital as relations between Washington and London.

It is perfectly clear from informed government circles here that Dulles will hear some blunt, although not unfriendly, talk in his conferences with the new Conservative Cabinet.

He will be told especially that Canada considers co-operation in the economic field to be no less important than co-operation in the diplomatic and defence field.

In particular he will be told that the NATO treaty, the mutual defence and diplomatic clauses of which involve Canada in an annual expenditure of approximately $2,000,000,000, must become operative in its social and economic clauses as well.

The clauses were inserted at Canada's insistence. But so far all attempts to bring about action under them have failed. It is the contention of the Cabinet ministers that the U.S. wheat dumping policy of recent months, in addition to violating the spirit of GATT, also has violated the letter of the economic and social position of NATO.

Homage Paid New Aga Khan

GENEVA (AP)—Aga Khan IV, handsome 20-year-old Harvard University senior, mounted a white satin throne on the lawn of his family's lakeside villa today and received the homage of his kneeling religious followers.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By DINAH BERR and IRVING STRICKLAND

Question: "What is your opinion of B.C. historian Bruce McKelvie's suggestion that there is a sufficient number of statues of Sir James Douglas around and the school children should contribute to a statue of a typical school 'marm' for the centennial year?"

Art McKilligan, foreman, 4200 Tyndall Avenue: "I think the money could be used for something far more useful than a statue of anything. What's the point in building statues?"

Victor Gnam, mechanic, 719 Daffodil: "I don't think they should contribute to either statue. If the government wants a statue, let them pay for it. The idea is ridiculous."

Mrs. E. Scott, 966 Bank Street: "That's a good idea. School children would probably be much more interested in a statue of a teacher than of anything else."

Miss Elsa Faderberg, 4247 Wilkeson: "At least it's a better idea than a statue of Sir James Douglas but I'd like to know what they would consider a typical 'school marm.' Would she represent B.C. teachers as they are now or as they were in 1858?"

Bob Thorburn, service manager, 2717 Shelbourne: "There are enough statues around. The money should be used to renew historical sites, like the old fort at Rodd Hill. Why don't we do something that would attract tourists here?"

Mrs. Rod Michell, Saanich: "I'd far sooner see the money spent on a children's hospital or solarium. A statue's alright but all that money should be put towards a project that the children would benefit from."

Diesel Probe Ends Hearings; Europe Next

VANCOUVER (CP)—The three-man Kellogg royal commission investigating need for firemen on Canadian Pacific Railway diesel locomotives in freight and yard work, leaves here Sunday after completing its evidence-taking across Canada.

The commission, which has heard 2,500,000 words of testimony since its hearings opened four months ago, will stop briefly at Nelson, B.C., to examine payment of differentials to CPR crews on mountain and valley runs, another subject it is investigating.

It is also studying the basis of payment to firemen for locomotive inspection before and after runs.

The commission, set up Jan. 17 after a nine-day CPR strike across Canada, is expected to report its findings at the end of the year.

Mr. Justice Roy L. Kellogg said it would probably sit again in Ottawa Oct. 15 to hear refuting evidence and final argument.

Meanwhile, he and the commissioners, Chief Justice Campbell C. McLaurin of the Alberta Supreme Court trial division and Mr. Justice Martineau of the Quebec Court of Queen's Bench will make a four-week inspection of European railroads.

The commission's decision on the need for firemen in a diesel locomotive is expected to set the pattern for other North American lines.

TRIED TO KILL

Buckell Convicted In Bizarre Holdup

VANCOUVER (CP)—John William Buckell, who bungled a weird and bizarre bank robbery, was found guilty Friday of intending to wound and attempting to kill a bank accountant and policeman.

Sentence will be passed July 23 by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson. Buckell, 43, unfolded an elaborate plan for the holdup of the main branch of the Royal Bank of Canada March 15 so that he might be shot and killed by police to end his financial troubles.

A psychiatrist called in his defence said he diagnosed Buckell—a one-time cost accountant with an IQ of 140—as a psychoneurotic with chronic anxiety neurosis.

Buckell pleaded not guilty to the charges of intending to wound and attempting to kill accountant Ronald Compston and Constable Kenneth Miles and another charge of assault with intent to steal. No money was taken.

A woman's cry echoed through the Assize Court room when prosecutor W. A. Schultz, in his charge to the jury, accused Buckell of dishonesty in telling his girl friend he was divorced.

Heads turned in the direction of the fashionably-dressed Miss Vivian Greaves, 19, who had been identified as the girl friend. She sat in the public gallery, her face buried in her hands.

Mr. Schultz said: "At the age of 40, he falls in

FULTON HASN'T HEARD OF NEW NORMAN DATA

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Fulton said Friday he knows of no new "secret intelligence report" from Cairo respecting Herbert Norman, Canadian ambassador to Egypt who committed suicide in Cairo last April.

Mr. Fulton was commenting on Washington reports, not carried by The Canadian Press, that a "secret intelligence report" said Norman jumped from a Cairo building because he anticipated a new loyalty check that would have forced him to involve many other Canadian and U.S. officials.

Civil Servants Right to Bargain Rare Privilege

Answer Mostly
'No' in Canada

By The Canadian Press

A new answer is to be given soon in British Columbia to this question:

Are provincial government employees entitled to bargain collectively?

A survey by The Canadian Press shows that in Canada up to now the answer usually has been a firm no.

When the 12,000 members of the B.C. Civil Servants' Association threatened to strike this week for full bargaining rights, they were striving for something enjoyed only by provincial government workers in Saskatchewan.

ALLOW BRIEFS

In other provinces, civil servants can submit briefs to their employers, and that's all.

Whether that will remain all in B.C. is up to Chief Justice Gordon Sloan, whose appointment to a royal commission on the matter helped avert the strike. Both Premier Bennett and civil servant leader George Horridge have agreed to abide by his recommendations.

Government workers in Saskatchewan received their bargaining rights when the CCF government came to power in 1945. They have the right to strike, but never have used it.

In 1945, employees of the Saskatchewan Power Corporation threatened to strike for wage increases. They were not in the category of civil servants, however, and the dispute was settled through conciliation.

In Manitoba, employees of a power corporation retained their union membership and continued to bargain after the government took over ownership of the firm. But their rights, not guaranteed by law, can be abolished at the government's discretion.

MOST IN ASSOCIATION

Other Manitoba government workers employees are specifically excluded from provincial labor laws. They are represented by the Manitoba Government Employees Association, whose leaders are restricted to submitting briefs and meeting with cabinet ministers several times a year.

It's much the same story in Ontario, Quebec, Alberta, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

In New Brunswick some of the 2,600 civil servants belong to the Canadian Labor Congress in addition to the New Brunswick Civil Servants Association. The CLC sometimes assists in disputes if enough of its members are involved.

Nova Scotia's 3,100 government employees not only have no bargaining rights, they have no association to speak for them. Preliminary steps were taken during the 1956 session of the legislature to organize one, but it isn't known when it will be in operation.

Insp. Harvey Retiring In August

Thirty years of police work end August 1 for Inspector C. H. Harvey, head of the Victoria sub-division of the RCMP.

He will go on three months leave pending retirement, and will continue to live here at 1032 Victoria Avenue.

Insp. Harvey joined the force in Regina in 1919. In 1949 he was commissioned a sub-inspector and has commanded the sub-division here since March, 1951.

Prior to this he had served in Regina, Battleford, Winnipeg, Portage la Prairie and Edmonton.

Trucker Blames Poor Wages For Overloads

Poor wages was given as an excuse for overloading gravel trucks by one trucker in Colwood RCMP court Friday.

James Boyles, Cobble Hill, was one of eight truck drivers fined for carrying overweight loads on Trans-Canada Highway on the Malahat.

Magistrate A. I. Thomas, after hearing a number of charges and getting no reasonable explanation, finally asked Boyles, who said:

"I think it's because we don't get a decent wage and if we want any kind of a load to pay we've got to overload."

"Whose fault is that?" the magistrate wanted to know.

"It seems to be the trucker's fault. They can't get together and get us a decent wage."

Boyles was fined $15 and $5.50 costs.

Man, Wife Stowaways Fined in U.K.

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng. (Reuters)—Thomas Thomas, 36, said today he and his wife, Joan, 22, stowed aboard the liner Ivernia at Montreal because he could find no work in Canada and his wife needed an operation.

The British emigrant and his wife pleaded guilty to stowaway charges, and were fined £20 each or one month in jail.

Ike, P M Warn Red Threat Great

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Suhrawardy of Pakistan said today international communism continues to be a "major threat" to the security of the free world.

Both Becks Indicted On Larceny

SEATTLE (AP)—The King County Grand Jury indicted teamster president Dave Beck and his son, Dave Beck Jr., Friday on charges of grand larceny of union funds.

The rotund president of the nation's biggest union quickly surrendered for routine booking, mugging and fingerprinting, posted $3,000 bond and called a press conference to denounce the action as "simply ridiculous."

Dave junior went through the ritual, too, but didn't attend the conference at which his dad said he spoke for both.

After saying there wasn't "a chance in a million" he would be convicted, Beck left on a tour of the nation which will take him to a half dozen union meetings around the country.

Another Grand Jury in a federal court at Tacoma, Wash., recently indicted Beck for income tax evasion.

Maximum penalty for grand larceny is 15 years in prison.

In a two-page statement, the two leaders expressed determination to support and strengthen collective security systems in Asia and the Middle East.

Eisenhower assured the prime minister that Pakistan's request to purchase U.S. surplus food grains would be given sympathetic and quick consideration as soon as continuation of the program has been approved by Congress.

Pakistan has been seeking 3,000,000 tons of food grains, mainly wheat, to be delivered by the United States during a three-year period.

The statement was issued as the Pakistani prime minister made ready to fly west for a 10-day sightseeing tour.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Mike Mansfield, assistant Democratic leader, proposed today that State Secretary Dulles visit Eastern Europe for a "first-hand exploration" of changes behind the Iron Curtain.

Mansfield also called on the Eisenhower administration to abandon what he said is its policy of "irresponsible fear" of Russia and shift to one of "positive action for peace."

'CRAZY', SAY EXPERTS

'Put Heat on Arctic' New Russ Dream

OTTAWA (CP)—The Russians say that for $35,000,000 the Canadian Arctic could be warmed by 25 to 30 degrees.

This could be done by damming Bering Strait, pumping cold Arctic water into the Pacific and letting warm Atlantic water flow through the Arctic.

This scheme—described by a Canadian Arctic expert here as "crazy"—is outlined in the most recent issue of the Soviet news bulletin published by the Russian embassy in Ottawa.

The Canadian expert said the plans sound as wild as one the Russians came up with several years ago: to dam the Lena River to create an inland sea which would warm up central Russia.

He suggested that if the Russians are serious they should try out the scheme first by transferring warm water from the Sea of

The Deep Gulf

RECENT EVENTS IN RUSSIA did not create but they have suddenly clarified the immense gulf of thought between the communism of Moscow and Peiping.

In Moscow Mr. Khrushchev has won the latest struggle for power, destroyed his comrades of yesterday, made his deal with the Red Army and, after denouncing Stalinism for so long, emerges with the look of a second Stalin.

In Peiping Mr. Mao Tse-tung has not only repudiated Stalinism and one-man rule in theory but has gone on to announce a completely new system of communism in action; or rather he has revived the old, original communist theory which seems new because Russia has suppressed it for nearly forty years.

The Chinese leader's heretical views were revealed last February but his lengthy speech was not published until a few weeks ago and only now, when the fine print is examined, is its importance realized in the Western world.

Briefly, Mr. Mao has re-applied the New Economic Policy which Lenin inaugurated in the early nineteen-twenties as a forced retreat from socialism after the early chaos of the Bolshevik revolution.

The N.E.P., as it was called, halted the revolutionary drive to socialize all Russian business and allowed some sectors of the economy, notably the farm industry, to remain in private hands.

But with Lenin's early death, Stalin repealed the N.E.P., exterminated the last of the bourgeoisie, collectivized the farms (at the cost of starving millions of peasants), exiled his rival, Trotsky, and built up his personal dictatorship.

As Mr. Isaac Deutscher, the distinguished student of Russia and biographer of Stalin, remarks in a recent article, the Russian and Chinese revolutions were different in kind from the start and their differences explain the recent diversions in their policy.

The Russian communists came to power only to face a series of civil wars. In exterminating their enemies at home, they came to distrust all opposition and learned how to suppress all rivals with the efficient brutality applied a few days ago to four leading members of the government.

The Chinese communists fought their civil war before they came to power and thus they were free to turn their full attention (apart from routine executions and mopping-up operations) to the task of economic reconstruction.

Now Mr. Mao proclaims what the Russian dictators must regard as a dangerous, incredible heresy. Not only does he repudiate one-man rule, as briefly denounced and lately revived by Mr. Khrushchev, but he rejects also the monolithic government and the infallible communist party.

Of course, he says, Marxism is the only correct interpretation of historic forces, but Marxism can be interpreted in many different ways.

His former phrase—"let a hundred flowers blossom and let a hundred schools of thought contend"—has usually been regarded as an oratorical flourish and a mere cliché up to now. Yet the Chinese government is actually allowing serious criticism of its regime. It has nationalized industry but permitted a substantial private ownership. And, in a final heresy, Mr. Mao declares that workers cannot be denied the right to strike.

Thus he revives in Chinese version the N.E.P. which Stalin crushed and admits "the inevitability of gradualism" on the road to true socialism. Moreover, with extraordinary candor, he repudiates the convenient lie with which Stalin so long deceived the Russian people. No paradise for the workers, he says, lies around the corner. It will take "many decades" to complete the revolution and give China a reasonable standard of living.

The meaning of this ideological schism between the two communist giants will not be known for a long time but it must haunt Mr. Khrushchev even at the moment of his triumph.

Livening Up Saanich

SAANICH'S "DECEMBERISTS"—a new group seeking progressive government in the municipality—have laid out for themselves a commendable program.

Part of it is aimed directly at those forces which members consider detrimental to Saanich's development. But at least one objective should win the support of all elements in the community.

The group plans to work for a larger turn-out of voters when elections roll around. It wants to hear from the Saanich residents who don't bother going to the polls and who, the "Decemberists" believe, are largely responsible for what they consider the backward outlook of some councillors.

Formation of ratepayers' organizations and other bodies seeking to stimulate interest in particular municipal programs is not new. The Saanich group, because it attacks a particular faction in the council, will automatically draw opposition from supporters of the representatives it attacks. Conceivably the opposition will organize itself for a battle.

And this could be a highly desirable development in Saanich. The council of that municipality has, over the years, established a reputation for internal conflict. Such animosities, however, have not succeeded in recent times in interesting enough residents to bring out a majority of the enfranchised public to municipal polls. Perhaps the new organization can. If it does, then it will have justified its existence regardless of its success or failure in attaining other objectives.

'Or Swing on a Star'

We have been reading a great deal about the present "Geophysical Year" when the leading scientists of all nations will endeavor to explore space in an effort to learn the secrets of interstellar regions.

Now, why go to all this elaborate investigation, and at a vast expenditure of money, when we hear the daily warbling of the theme song of a famous band leader informing us that "I'm on my way to the stars."

Allowing this gentleman a travelling speed of, say, three miles per hour he will be due at the nearest star in a few million years so why worry about it now when he is doing it "for free."

We also hear a popular song wherein the singer blithely informs his listeners that he is going to climb up to the Milky Way, via a moonbeam, to procure some ice cream for his girl friend.

Although this will also take him some millions of years to accomplish, and the ice cream will have soured by the time he gets there, why not let him go to it and save all the vast expense and effort of the Geophysical Year?

A somewhat lesser effort, but nonetheless praiseworthy, is the singer who states that he is going to buy a rainbow in order to make a ring for his lady love.

With all these astronomical feats already under way, or so we learn from the popular (?) songs, are not the scientists a bit behind time in their inauguration of the Geophysical Year?

I. D. BUNKER.

CCF and Funds

Many sincere people support the CCF and other parties because they believe that the major evils of our time can be solved without bothering to abolish the basic economic foundation of modern society of wage labor and capital.

The idea is that the "welfare" state will whittle away poverty with "social services" financed by profits from nationalized industries and taxes on profits of private industry and abolish war by "working for peace" through the U.N. The fallacy of such ideas has been proven over and over again with sickening consistency in the past.

This doesn't stop the CCF from posing as a "socialist" party. And so, unlike the "old line" parties, the new line CCF doesn't accept money from big business in order to promulgate their particular ideas of capitalism. They apparently stoop lower than that by accepting money from the unions ($35,000 from the Ontario Federation of Labor and other Ontario unions in the 1953 election) money that was paid in by the workers to be used in the economic struggle of keeping the price of their commodity up along with all the others.

This is no precedent. In the hungry thirties the German Social Democrats spent 300,000 marks of trade union campaign money donated by the General Federation of Trade Unions, to ensure Hindenburg's re-election. And Hindenburg bowed Hitler into the Reichstag.

If union funds are going to be used to maintain the social set-up that relieves the worker of the fruits of his labor, we suggest that they be equally divided between the four major parties of capitalism or be contributed to none at all. There's nothing like financing your own brain-washing.

Change and Decay in All Around I See

ANYONE who is not less than fifty years old must surely have noticed the great deterioration in the weather. Look at this summer for example and consider the bad time they have had in Vancouver with torrential rains blotting out several presentations of the Theatre Under the Stars and the baseball games in the stadium at Queen Elizabeth Park. And even Victoria has had some very changeable days lately. Well, I blame the modern, scientific methods of making weather and weather predictions because when I was a very little boy I can not remember any bad weather during the whole long, hot and sunny summer holidays.

Of course that could be a trick of the memory and I will admit that we had rain in Victoria in July once or twice—maybe even more often—on occasions of big organized outings like Sunday school picnics or picnics held by the AOUW or the Eagles.

But by and large our summers, in retrospect, seemed to consist of long and lovely and lazy days; of barefeet and dusty roads; of woodsy smells on hot uplands and of sea smells along the warm beaches.

Colder Now

And that brings up another aspect of the deterioration of the times. We used to swim—a sort of dog paddle—from those beaches; from Ross Bay, Foul Bay, Willows, Cadboro and Cordova in clammy cotton bathing suits, spending a whole day in and out of the water.

Now, quite recently, I gingerly put a tentative toe into the water on one of those beaches and the icy chill was like an electric shock. Which is further proof of the degeneration in local conditions. The earliest weatherman I can remember was Mr. Napier Denison who practised his mysterious arts on the top of Gonzales hill and he could produce wonderful weather. People planning picnics would phone him and ask if such or such a date would be propitious and he would never let them down.

Whether he tossed sticks like old Chinese fortune tellers, relied on the twinges of an old saber wound, or held up a wetted finger to test the wind, I do not know. But he would give a considered opinion.

"Yes, I think perhaps July 13 will be fair," he would say, "but you just might arrange to move into the church hall in case of a sudden change."

And everyone was happy.

Push-Button

I am not one to bemoan the "good old days" as in too many instances they weren't good at all but in the matter of this change from rule-of-thumb weather prognostication to the present push-button type I fear we have made one of the less worthwhile changes.

And it's a sobering reflection to look down a corridor of years and consider what stupendous changes we have witnessed in this century and to mark which of these changes have occurred by painless evolution and which have left a stamp of nostalgia.

For example the advent and transition of the airplane have left no mark on my memory; nor has the miracle of electricity. But to see policemen and firemen become progressively younger was always an astonishing thing.

When we were very young almost all policemen were "old guys" with tremendous mustaches adorning their stern faces; so were firemen. Then in a decade or two it seemed that the city was recruiting men younger and younger.

Most surprising of all, however, was the apparent and visual fact that instead of consisting of sophisticated young men and women, the high school students were mere kids.

Well, this has been a bit of a digression but I'll gamble that most of you have had similar experiences.

What I meant to tell you of was an expedition to Foul Bay on one of the best days in Mr. Denison's power to give. A day of sun and sparkling sea. We were a half dozen boys playing like wild Indians in our makeshift bathing suits; cooking potatoes in the fire embers; building rafts and racing like young colts over the sand bar.

Finally we knocked together quite a stout raft and, with boards for paddles, made a long voyage out to the entrance of the bay. It was quite a chore making the last hundred yards or so back to the beach and our fire and thoughts of home and supper began to exert a pull.

In those days we were undressed and dressed without benefit of much cover and our clothes were strewn generally on logs just clear of the fire.

Minor Tragedy

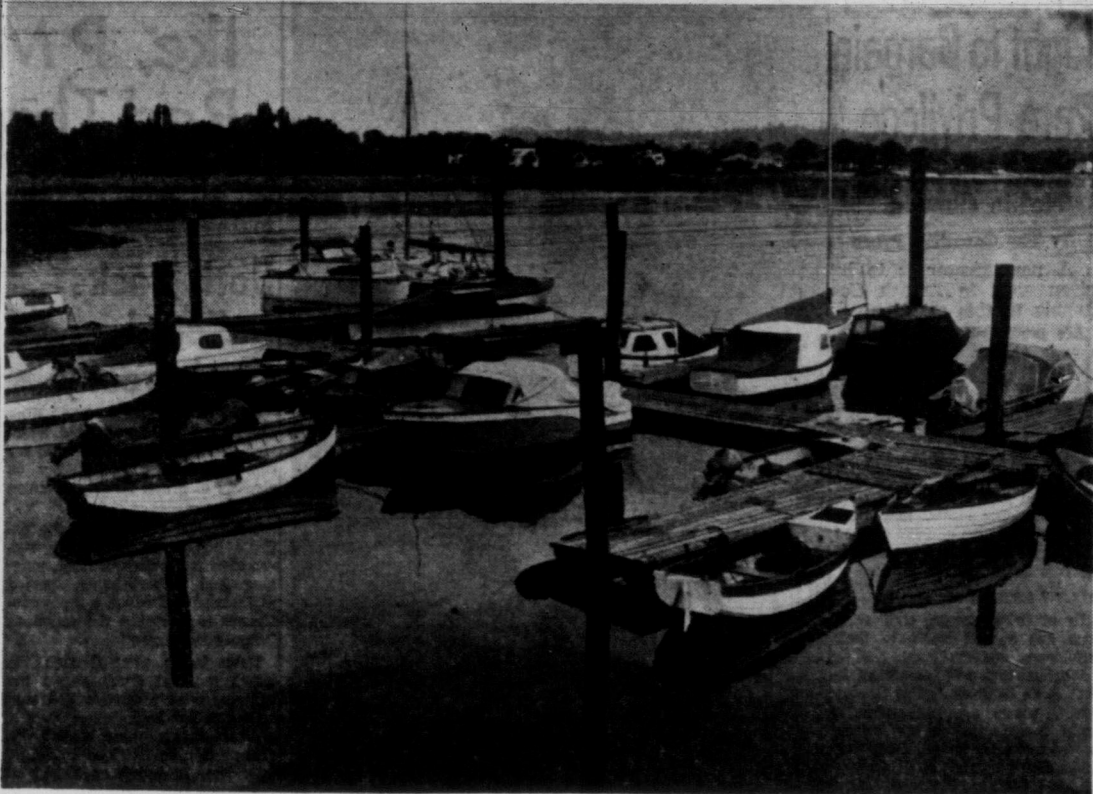

And now a minor tragedy unfolded as we looked where our clothes had lain and found none and looked again at the fire to see a few charred bits of cloth smoldering in the ashes.

The thing just didn't make any sense until we heard a wild, shrill laugh from the bank above and saw a gangling youth—whom we knew—loping out of sight.

I suppose he was pyromaniac of a sort—I know he was a bit around the bend—and this destruction of our clothes had given him some queer sort of satisfaction.

It was a long, long walk home in clammy cotton bathing suits and on barefeet and riding with us the unpleasant thought of explaining our predicament to our mothers.

How to Keep a Mouse

TO the charge that this column discusses only trivial and irrelevant matters, unlike the noble sentiments of the columns directly to the left, I answer by discussing today a very serious matter—indeed, not only serious but tragic. I am referring to Mr. Snifkin.

Now, you may not consider a mouse serious but very likely you know little about mice. Except, perhaps, for the white, variety kept as pets in their childhood, I doubt that a single reader has kept a mouse.

That is what makes the misfortune of my neighbor, Mr. Snifkin, so serious. He kept a mouse. And though lacking experience and a frame of reference, Mr. Snifkin is inclined to believe that it would be cheaper to keep a mistress, much less trouble and certainly much less deceitful.

FOR to keep a mouse in the home of Mrs. Snifkin requires a degree of deceit which can only be called diabolical and Mr. Snifkin is not a diabolical man. He is merely a kindly, weak-minded, mouse-loving man.

Naturally, therefore, when Mr. Snifkin heard a crackling sound on the log mantel shelf of his summer cabin and then perceived a momentary movement there he instinctively, and with rare presence of mind, diverted his wife's attention by suggesting that her newly-baked bread was not up to par. That always diverts Mrs. Snifkin remarkably.

Busy for some time with a defence of her cookery, she did not observe, as Mr. Snifkin did, a tiny grey presence move along the mantel and begin to nibble a bar of chocolate. After a while Mrs. Snifkin returned to her kitchen disgruntled beyond grumbling, the mouse returned to his crack in the wall and Mr. Snifkin sat down to ponder his problem.

It was a formidable problem. In the first place, the mouse evidently lived on chocolate, the supply was limited and Mr. Snifkin could obtain no more since, like all hard-working and prosperous husbands, he had no money but was doled out his daily rations like any prisoner.

In the second place, no matter how he tried to cover up his own trail and the mouse's, Mrs. Snifkin was bound to find out. She finds out everything. And once she found out, that would be the end of the mouse and probably of its young.

For several days Mr. Snifkin conducted a strategy of evasive action with the skill of an old campaigner. He thrust the last of the chocolate into the mouse's hole. He broke up dog biscuits and soda crackers for the same purpose.

BUT his charity was the mouse's undoing, as so often happens with charity. The mouse became so fond of Mr. Snifkin that it appeared regularly on the mantel for its rations, as Mr. Snifkin appeared three times a day for his.

Inevitably, therefore, Mrs. Snifkin discovered the mouse in Mr. Snifkin's absence. He returned from his labor in the woods one day to hear of that discovery from Mrs. Snifkin, who regarded it as her own.

Pretending ignorance, Mr. Snifkin argued that the mouse was harmless, undoubtedly had several children to support and should be left alone. This argument failed to impress Mrs. Snifkin in the least and she placed a saucer of poisonous mice seed on the mantel shelf.

MR. SNIFKIN emptied it when she was not looking and explained that the mouse had probably eaten it all. This gambit worked twice but Mrs. Snifkin's credulity has its limits. After the saucer had been emptied the third time in twenty-four hours her suspicions were aroused.

In vain Mr. Snifkin threw himself and the mouse upon her mercy. Would she slaughter an innocent creature with all the internal agony of poison, and doom its offspring to starvation? You bet she would.

All right then, said Mr. Snifkin, let the crime be on her head. He would have nothing to do with it and set off in highest dudgeon for the woods. At the bend in the trail he shouted back that dead mice in the walls would do Mrs. Snifkin's living room no good.

HE was right. Mr. Snifkin is always right. For sure enough, a few days later, there arose behind the mantel shelf what we may call the odor of mortality in a violent degree until the room became uninhabitable. Mrs. Snifkin retreated to the kitchen not, I regret to say, with remorse but with language unpolite and unprintable. Mr. Snifkin retreated to the woods feeling, as he says, like a murderer.

The moral of this history is obvious: the male is the gentler sex and a little charity is a dangerous thing.

FROM LONDON

The Old Question: Will They, Won't They

RECENT events on the disarmament front nicely illustrate the extent of the new uncertainty caused by the great purge in Moscow. What has happened is simple enough. From mid-June until a couple of days ago, the Soviet representative at the marathon disarmament meeting, Valerian Zorin, never opened his mouth except to put a question.

During all this long period, the American and Western disarmament proposals were expounded to Zorin in minute detail, without evoking any response whatever, either pro or con.

In the American delegation particularly, hopes none-the-less ran high that Zorin's response would be positive when it finally came. As it happened, two of the junior staff members of the American delegation had a long-planned luncheon date with their Soviet opposite numbers on the day that the big news came from Moscow of the fall of Molotov, Kaganovitch and Malenkov.

Without any prodding, the Soviet officials volunteered the forecast that the Moscow shakeup would greatly facilitate an accord in London.

Gave Answer

Thus the irrepressible optimism which springs from Harold Stassen's equally irrepressible ambition appeared to be justified. Then, at long last, Zorin gave the anxiously awaited answer to the proposals of the West. It was negative, it was violent, and it dashed every hope but Stassen's, whose hopes cannot be absolutely dashed.

Now the debate among the experts centres on the motive of the masters of the Kremlin for whom Zorin speaks. On one side, the events in Moscow following the first fall of Malenkov are constantly cited.

When Malenkov was demoted from the premiership, it will be remembered, Molotov was immediately assigned to make a major foreign policy speech. It was the most unyielding and the most Stalinist in tone, of all the foreign pronouncements made by high Soviet officials since the death of Stalin. In the outcome, however, this Molotov speech proved to mean very little.

It was only a kind of public exhibition of muscle-flexing intended to prevent the outer world from suspecting that the Soviets had been weakened or softened by their inner tensions. The words were hardly out of old Molotov's mouth, than the Kremlin briskly inaugurated the era of extreme sweet reasonableness that culminated in the famous summit meeting at Geneva.

There are those, therefore, who maintain that Zorin's disappointing response to the Western disarmament proposals is an episode comparable to this Molotov speech.

After the divisions in the Kremlin have been so dramatically revealed, the argument runs, the Soviet leaders dare not seem at all conciliatory lest they also seem weak. On the basis of this argument, a later sharp turn in Soviet disarmament policy is hoped for.

But the other school of experts points, with equal cogency, to the particular issue on which Zorin was sharpest and most negative. This was simply the issue of truly effective international inspection and control of nuclear disarmament.

If one boldly simplifies a matter more insanely complex than atomic physics, the Western powers offered the Soviets a treaty having two main stages.

First Stage
In the first stage, tests of nuclear and thermonuclear weapons were to be provisionally suspended for ten months. Certain other steps were also to be taken. A limited inspection and control system was to be installed, to police the suspension of bomb tests.

And meanwhile Soviet and Western experts were to use this ten-month period to reach agreement on the technical plan for stage two.

Besides many other features, stage two was to have two main features of high significance. The production of nuclear raw material for use in weapons was to be forbidden. And a vastly more extensive, intrusive and far-reaching system, of inspection and control was to be set up, to insure enforcement of the cut-off of nuclear weapons output.

In effect, then, the Western proposals were designed to find out whether the Soviets would ever accept the only kind of inspection and control system on which real, full scale disarmament can be safely based.

Flag Added

FROM THE NEW YORK TIMES
A NEW FLAG, the eighty-first, fluttered to the top of a flagstaff in front of the United Nations buildings in this city recently. It was red, gold and green, with a black star in the center, and has never been — and, we hope, never will be — flown in battle.

It was the flag of Ghana, a new state which came into the U.N. last March as a union of British Togoland with the former Gold Coast colony. Now a nation of over 4,000,000 people, spread over an area of nearly 91,700 square miles, Ghana has the same voting power in the U.N. Assembly as the United States and Russia.

Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld described the admission of Ghana as "one more step toward universality of membership" for the U.N. It was that, to be sure, just as were the admissions of Morocco, Tunisia and the Sudan, six months ago, and other admissions which have raised the number of U.N. members from the original fifty-one to the present fourscore and one.

We all know that there is one conspicuous exception to this approach to universality, but Ghana and other small nations admitted since the signing of the Charter are in U.N. not because of power, not because of pity, but because they have given proof that they intend to support the Charter's principles. None of them has ever made war against the United Nations.

The U.N. can become truly universal when the Charter's principles are universally accepted not only by new members but by one vastly populous non-member but by some who signed the founding document in San Francisco in 1945. Meanwhile we welcome Ghana, another free voice in what was once the darkness and silence of Africa.

Called to the Bar

"You are called to the degree of barrister to protect and defend the rights and interests of such persons, as may employ you. You shall conduct all causes faithfully and to the best of your ability. You shall neglect no man's interest, not seek to destroy any man's property. You shall not refuse causes or complaints reasonably founded, nor shall you promote suits upon frivolous pretences. You shall not pervert the law to favour or prejudice any man, but in all things shall conduct yourself truly and with integrity. In fine, the Queen's interests and your fellow subjects you shall uphold and maintain according to the constitution and laws of this province."

SILENUS

Yesterday the registrar of the Supreme Court laid these injunctions upon Mr. John Finlayson Wood in open court, and Mr. Wood replied:

"All this I swear to observe and perform to the best of my knowledge and ability. So help me God."

Before the Chief Justice, who years before had taken the same oath in the same room, Victoria's newest fledgling lawyer made his first appearance in the black gown of the barrister.

Many years of study and preparation on his part had gone before, and many more will follow, but never again will he take that oath. It is the main milestone on what will be, let us hope, a long and happy career.

In these days when so many occupations are calling themselves professions, the distinction between mere money-making knowledge and professional obligations becomes more and more blurred. Which this column thinks is unfortunate.

A person who becomes a lawyer takes upon himself a public obligation, which must be observed without reference to remuneration. If the client can pay him, well and good. He should do so, for he is getting expert advice (often unpalatable) and service. But the lawyer's privileges of exclusive audience in court and so on are not given to him on the basis of his mere ability to pass examinations.

He has to take the oath repeated here before he can do so, and it is that oath which adds the professional responsibility to the privilege. Hence a person in trouble and quite unable to pay is entitled to just the same treatment from the lawyer as the rich man. The lawyer must "conduct all causes faithfully and to the best of his ability." If he does so cheerfully, more power to him.

Mr. Wood has become part of the system of justice. As an officer of the court and as an advocate he joins with the judges and his new professional brethren in the endless search for truth which has always been the object of the law. Like that which Norman Douglas called the only worthwhile warfare, the never ending crusade against fools, the law's attempt to find the truth has been going on since man emerged from slavery and law began.

Sounds formidable, truth being so elusive a thing. But every now and then it shows up in the lawyer's career, and the days when it appears he counts well spent. Whether his bill is paid or not.

There are those who agree with Jack Cade that all lawyers should be hanged. It could happen; and Mr. Wood would go to the lamp post with the rest. But this column ventures to predict that if this country were suddenly denuded of its legal men, something much worse would rise up in their place.

LONDON LETTER

Inside the Marble Arch

LONDON—I'm going to miss Bugsie. . . . He was what might be termed the poor man's Fabian of the Yard. He was a plain-clothes detective with the London police and used to drop into our local pub regularly.

For me he was both a good friend and a wonderful source of information. Any big crime that cropped up, he could give me the inside dope on it.

In any of the novels I wrote when I dealt with the police he could always put me straight on technicalities.

And always he was interesting to talk to because he had a never ending fund of titbits about the seamier side of the big city.

Bugsie told me something about London's famous Marble Arch which the average Londoner, let alone the overseas sight-seer, doesn't know.

There are police interrogation rooms and cells inside the arch, where troublesome characters can be held until a van comes to take them off to the nearest police station.

I also learned from Bugsie that it is only the general public who refer to Scotland Yard as "the Yard." The police themselves call it "the CO"—The Commissioner's Office.

The reason I soon won't be seeing Bugsie again is that he has given up being a detective and is going to Canada to settle. Last night he told me he was looking for a job to fill in the time until his ship sails.

He had only been offered one so far, but it's not one he's taking. It was the job of a salesman for a firm that manufactures very unusual chewing gum vending machines.

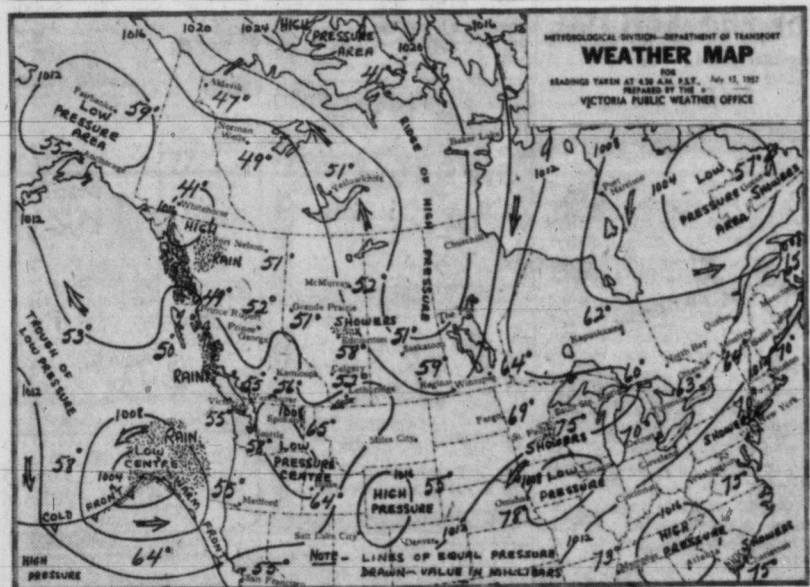

They have chewing gum in them all right—but no works.

Customers put their sixpences in and are furious that they seem to be out of order.

"I was told that anyone who displays one of these machines is guaranteed a take of £10 a week, all profit," said Bugsie, adding with a laugh: "The rackets they get up to in this town!"

By-Election Holds Key To Margin in Commons

GUELPH, Ont. (CP)—A riding that has voted Liberal in 16 of 22 previous elections votes Monday in a contest that holds national interest because of the close party standing in the House of Commons.

The voters of Wellington South name their member late because of the death during the campaign for the June 10 federal election of Liberal candidate Henry Hosking.

The voters of Wellington South name their member late because of the death during the campaign for the June 10 federal election of Liberal candidate Henry Hosking.

Only David Tolton, 29-year-old business man running for the Liberals, is making his first bid for political office.

Alfred D. Hales, 48, is running as a Progressive Conservative. He is a Guelph alderman who runs his own farm and retail food store.

Thomas L. Withers, 45, international representative of the United Steel Workers of America and CCF standard-bearer, ran third behind Mr. Hosking and Mr. Hales in the 1953 election.

The Monday vote holds more than usual interest because of the narrow margin held by Progressive Conservative government forces in the 265-seat Commons.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's forces hold 109 seats. The Liberals, including a Liberal-Labor member who supports the party, have 108. Others are: CCF 25, Social Credit 19, Independent 2, Independent Liberal 1, Independent Progressive-Conservative 1, vacant one.

OVERLAND HIKE

Their starting point will be Rocky Mountain House in the Alberta foothills. They plan to hike 250 miles overland to the junction of the Blueberry and Columbia Rivers, where they left their canoe July 1.

Stanley said they should average 20 miles a day. In their 50-pound rucksacks will be sleeping bags, tent, spare clothing, fishing equipment and food for 12 days.

Stanley, who has planned the trip, is a native of North Wales. He says he spent long hours canoeing in the sea off the Menai Straits, and in 1954 he canoed the North Saskatchewan from Rocky Mountain House to Edmonton—120 miles as the crow flies.

He is also a member of the Canadian Alpine Club, and has climbed in Canada, the United States, Mexico and Europe. He and Swan, a metallurgist, have spent many hours of practice together in their canoe.

In the past ten years the Canadian Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service has supplied 1,606,896 bottles of whole blood for free transfusions to 1,122,995 patients in Canadian hospitals.

Decrepit No. 10 Downing Street Headache Inherited by Macmillan

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Macmillan has appointed a committee to consider what to do about a structurally decrepit building his predecessors have been complaining about for more than 200 years—10 Downing Street.

Macmillan, whose lot is to live in the building, told parliament this week that the drafty old place suffered from dry rot, decay of timber supports and irregular settlement. These are the same complaints William Pitt made in the time of Napoleon.

Everybody knows the building is about the poorest home for a first minister of any major country in the world.

DINGY AND DARK
Despite efforts by prime minister's wives, it remains a labyrinth of dingy corridors and dark rooms. Its sole merit is that it stands close to the Houses of Parliament and other government buildings.

Some prime ministers have so disliked it that they used it only for emergency purposes. Benjamin Disraeli for many years wouldn't have anything to do with it at all.

The prime minister hasn't even got a key to the place because many years ago Parliament decided it didn't want him locking himself in at crucial times.

called him "a perfidious rogue," and Sir Winston Churchill termed him "a profiteering contractor."

It was offered, in 1731, to Robert Walpole, who accepted it on the condition it would be a home for the first lord of the treasury. Since all prime ministers have been such first lords, the prime minister has come to live there.

But even though the old place is held together mostly by thick coats of paint, Britons are reluctant to see it changed. It has become too historical.

Architects considering renovation are stumped by the cramped area and cultural tradition. To give the building floor space it needs to fit present-day needs, they talk of building it 10 storeys high. And they are agreed they will have to knock out a lot of walls inside, and maybe convert the outside from brick to stone.

Whatever the architects do, they will have to leave the black ebony door with the white number just exactly as it is.

Stratford in Retrospect; Dual Impressions Emerge

By AUDREY S.D. JOHNSON

During the hectic three days and nights at Stratford, impressions crowded on me one upon the other with such rapidity and variety that after nearly two weeks have gone by I am still unpacking my mental suitcase and sorting out the contents.

I find that what I have collected comes under two categories; the "uninvolved" and the "involved." Or perhaps it would be better to say the "professional" and the "personal."

Professionally speaking, cynicism is the keynote, tuned to the indisputable fact that nothing human is perfect. There is some anomaly in the circumstance that the bigger and better man builds, the fiercer and more unrelenting is the criticism he must face.

So on the Monday and Tuesday nights at Stratford, desks in the press room became dissecting tables and typewriters antiseptic, coldly impersonal probes and cutting tools.

We were of course, as press correspondents, there to judge impartially; to point out faults as honestly as we were able to succeed. Which is as it must be. Stratford, no more than anything or anyone, can grow on praise alone.

But when I spoke earlier of the "involved" or the "personal," I was referring to what impressions are left when one's duty to public and artist is done; when one can remove the microscopic lenses and consider the experience and its effect from a more emotional, less scientific standpoint.

Brisk Ghost

That done I, at least, have discovered that many things left a dual impression. Take the ghost of Hamlet's father, for example. Here was a triumph of make-up and costuming, all silvery-white and greenish shadows from head to foot with tatters of ectoplasmic gauze clinging to his armor.

But on the other hand, this was a most incisive, brisk and vigorous ghost as it moved about the battlements. The voice was full-bodied at times, at others hysterical to the point of bad melodrama.

Then, as to the costuming. One or two mistakes could be, and were, noted, such as the not very regal and rather garish gown worn by Queen Gertrude in the first court scene.

On the other hand, designer Dennis Healy had made brilliant use of color for purposes of symbolism and atmosphere. The rim-frosted, ice-blue cloaks and helmets of the guards on the battlements left us in no doubt as to the chill cold that clutched both body and spirit of these ghost-haunted men.

Contrasts

The court scene that immediately followed, with Claudius and Gertrude in strong glowing apricots and golds, suggested equally warmth and the ascendant sun of their fortunes.

Against this panoply of rich hues, Hamlet, in dull, unadorned black, descended the long stairs to stand immobile, silent and alone on a lower level of the apron stage.

And later, as relentless fate began to erode the fortunes of the king and queen, twilight tones of dull greens, blues and violets dominated in their costuming.

One might disagree heartily with the casting of Joy LaFleur as Gertrude, finding her an inadequate queen—yet admire the depth and realism of her torment in the bed chamber scene.

One could object strongly to the staging of Hamlet's scene with his father's ghost, yet acknowledge a touch of genius in the sequence that followed the entrance of the players.

Nothing was added to the wonderful flexible Shakespearean stage of Tanya Moiseiwitch. There was no artifice to hide Polonius, only the shadows of the columned central stage; no trees or stone walls for the grave-diggers, only an open trap door.

But I think no one present missed those props of the post-Shakespearean theatre. By the numerous subtle arts of director, stage and costume designer, each scene was established beyond doubt from the outset and in almost every instance, sustained by dramatic action, purveyed by a competent body of actors.

Too Rapid

Something has been said in criticism of the theatre's acoustics. For my part I felt failure to hear some parts of "Hamlet" was due much more to the speed with which lines were spoken than with any acoustical fault. When speeches were delivered at a more rational tempo not even the merest whisper was lost to me.

On the other hand, acoustics is not a factor it is always possible to perfect in one operation. And even R. H. Tanner, the electronics expert and acoustical engineer who has worked on this aspect of the new theatre, told me he was not yet satisfied.

This theatre, nevertheless, is a creation of beauty which is at the same time wonderfully practical, efficient and capable of producing the most genuine theatrical magic I have yet witnessed.

Certainly I am loathe to think of ever again seeing Shakespeare presented in the restricting dimensions of the picture-frame proscenium stage.

There is much more to be said about Stratford. So if readers of this column can stand it, the discussion will continue next week.

PERFECT PITCH and a flair for improvising are attributes of nine-year-old pianist Virginia Belfer. She gave her first full recital in Toronto before an audience of 50 music specialists, playing 10 selections by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Haydn and MacDowell, as well as one of her own compositions. Virginia began playing the piano at five and has what her teacher describes as "the authoritative touch of an experienced musician." Her home town is Galt, Ont. (CP Photo.)

Most Popular Wedding Song Unsuitable

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UP)—An Episcopal Church music expert would like to see some standard hymns abandoned.

"Many of the 'good old hymns' are neither good nor old," said Vernon DeTar, a member of the Episcopal Commission on music of the Episcopal Church and organist-choralemaster of New York's Church of the Ascension.

He also advised that songs such as "O Promise Me" should not be sung or played at church weddings because "they are not suitable at a religious service."

"The really old hymns go back to the 16th century, while we use little that was written before the 19th century," DeTar pointed out. "We should begin to use some of this early good music, as well as some of the fine new hymns being written if we wish to raise the standards of music in the church."

The music expert thus contrasted the two versions of the hymn "For All The Saints": "The 19th century version has a weak melody and cloying harmony."

"The one written in the 20th century has strength in all three elements—melody, harmony and rhythm."

MISCELLANY: Richard Egan, a prospective attorney before he took up acting, plays a lawyer in "Slaughter on 10th Avenue" for U.I. Natalie Wood's younger sister, Lana, is being considered for a role in Egan's new TV series. Lasso got quite a boost from Culver City, Calif., where a school poll of some 5,000 boys and girls turned up only two kids who aren't Lasso fans.

HANS GRUBER CONDUCTS

Sir Ernest's Choice Appealing For Butchart Garden Program

Sir Ernest MacMillan takes over at the Butchart Gardens next Thursday. There are very few musicians, conductors, whom I personally have admired as much as Sir Ernest. His accomplishments are extraordinary, as has been his career. It has been, also, a source of considerable gratification to us that he so readily accepted our invitation to conduct the orchestra at the gardens.

It is three years ago that Sir Ernest worked first with the Victoria Symphony. When we approached him at that time, he felt that he first wished to listen to a tape-recording of the orchestra before committing himself. Accordingly, some were sent to him to Toronto. He thought them worthy of his taking time out from his then heavy schedule to come to Victoria to conduct.

Those two concerts, in June of 1954, were I still think, a historic landmark in the life of our orchestra; the musicians responded to the great conductor in a manner not unlike a tennis player whose game can improve spectacularly in proportion to the quality of a much superior opponent's game.

Sir Ernest's presence on the podium, next Thursday, in itself guarantees an altogether superior concert. The music he has chosen should clinch the matter. The Oberon overture by Weber—a beautiful piece of generally underrated difficulty—but not by Sir Ernest, of course.

CONFIDENCE

His decision to begin the program with the Oberon is a measure of his gratifying, if mildly frightening, confidence in our orchestra. The same, only more so, goes for Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, which he readily agreed to do when I asked him to. The Pastoral belongs nowhere more naturally than in the Gardens.

After the intermission, Sir Ernest will be equally deft with lighter touches. A Suite of English Folk song—you will all know and recognize them—arranged for orchestra by Vaughan-Williams. A famous Nocturne by Chopin—originally for piano, of course—in Sir Ernest's own atmospheric orchestration.

Then "Voices of Spring"—Sir Ernest has a way with Strauss waltzes as if he were not Sir Ernest, but Herr Musikdirektor Ernst, straight from the Prater in Vienna. Finally, the "Soirees Musicales"—a collection of Rossini tunes a la Benjamin Britten.

See you Thursday at the Gardens.

THIS AMATEUR GUITARIST IS SYMPHONY ASPIRANT

If Hans Gruber should ever require a guitarist for his orchestra there is a gentleman in Victoria—or was Thursday night—who will be ready to fill the spot.

He has already auditioned and played, if not exactly WITH the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, at least alongside it.

At Thursday's Butchart Gardens concert he made several attempts to join the musicians on the platform but finally subsided in the middle of a spread blanket and contented himself with crooning and strumming in counterpoint to the scheduled program.

No one bothered him and obviously he was enjoying the evening in his own way. As to whether he made a favorable impression on Maestro Gruber—no comment.

ART IN REVIEW

By MONCRIEFF WILLIAMSON

Harbor Paintings Versus Camera's Artistic Record

If I was one of those people who wear hats, this week I would lift mine in salutation to W. D. West for his impression, "Harbour Calligraphy," in the current exhibition of paintings of the Inner Harbor which will be on view at the Art Gallery until July 28.

Williamson

It is a very good impression indeed, and serves the double purpose of giving artistic pleasure while demonstrating how an artist can take over where a camera fails. Herbert Sieber, a professional whose work naturally outshines the other paintings in an amateur exhibition, also goes beyond a camera's many limitations. And I would make special mention of "Harbor," by Louis Davies and the most interesting grouping of Regehr's harbor scene, which is only spoiled by thin painting and the careless use of whites; a weakness which I had noticed in two of his earlier abstractions recently exhibited.

But to return to the camera. Every painter should look upon the camera as a boy—a rival capable of capturing moods and impressions in a split second. When the man behind the camera is also an artist, the rivalry becomes dangerous. For this reason, many of the painters who have contributed works to this display should take notice of the photographs of Victoria Harbor by The Viewfinders and shown in the entrance hall.

The photographers have been attracted by the same subjects, and it must be admitted that as an artistic record of the Inner Harbor theirs is the more valuable contribution.

Or is this being unfair? These are, when all is said, amateur painters striving to convey to us their impressions.

pleasing picture. I also liked Maude Page's "Sundays-Sainte Ellice Point Bridge" with its Renoir sky. The same artist contributes a water color which manages to be both clean-cut and fresh, but would be greatly improved by glazing.

Spellbound

There is a good painting by Molly Privett, "Royal Roads," while D. Seely-Smith's "Harbor Water" is the more pleasing of her two works. I was intrigued by the "Harbor," of N. L. Gray who, using a mixed medium and a rather extraordinary technique produced an effect which had me spellbound for all of five minutes.

Another spellbinder is "Victoria Harbor from the Pacific Club," by D. J. Strodryk, but for different reasons. This picture has a native quality which is full of charm, though the result fails by being too overworked and fussy.

This same criticism applies to the two oils by A. B. Bechtell. "Fog Bound," by Muriel Barnes and works by Sylvia Sutton, Kay Hill-Tout, and D. Saul—the latter artist producing a pastel effect which is most pleasing.

Last week I was asking for marine paintings. Up to a point, this exhibition supplies them, but the total result is not entirely satisfactory.

However, I remain, as always, optimistic.

FOOTNOTE: Overheard in Victoria: "I wish they'd build that fireproof wing so we can see those pictures by Emily Post!"

Not a Machine

A painter must only begin where a photographer leaves off, and with so many skilled photographers at large the painter must be meticulous in his selection—remembering all the time that his imagination, unlike the camera, is not a machine.

Be as realistic as you wish, but don't forget the camera can creep in ahead of you.

And now for the pictures: "Kangaroo Point," by Margaret Sullivan, is highly traditional and well ordered. A

THE STAMP CORNER

By REG NAIRNE

While most of the colonies have completed their Queen Elizabeth sets long ago, there are still a few that have not made the change-over from George VI.

Pitcairn Island has recently fallen into line, with an attractive series of 11 stamps running through to the 2-6 value. (It is a relief to see for once a colony limiting the face value of its issues to its postal needs, rather than to its possibilities in the way of philatelic exploitation.) Both Tristan de Cunha and the Falkland Dependencies, for instance, have long sets running to the five pence.

Another late-comer to change over to a Queen Elizabeth set is New Hebrides. The current stamps, though not depicting the late King, still use his Royal Cypher in the design. A new series of 11 values, plus five postage due stamps, is in preparation. These will feature the Queen's cypher.

The first of the long series for each of the states making up the Malayan Federation are now on sale. These are the 20c and 35c values. As mentioned in a previous article there will be 14 stamps in each of the 10 sets before the series is completed.

Of these, sets Malacca and Penang will show Queen Elizabeth, the other eight featuring either their native rulers, or coats-of-arms.

U.S. commemoratives these days are generally printed to the tune of around 120 million of each, which is plenty to go around, to say the least. The latest stamp, a 3c issued July 4th, honoring the "Stars and Stripes," and depicting the flag in natural colors, will be limited to only 40 million copies, however.

The possibility that the letter rate will soon be boosted to 4c or 5c has been suggested as the reason for the cut.

BOOK TALK By JAMES SCOTT

Irish Renaissance Poet Turns Novelist

The Old Guard of the Irish Renaissance has been pretty well diminished. There are not too many left of that glorious company of people like Joyce and Synge and Stephens, the boys who made Ireland a land of great literary reputation in this century.

One of those who, at 75, is still around is Padraic Colum. Like quite a lot of the other members of the group, Colum was an Irishman who found he could do his best work outside Ireland. This has been a very curious literary phenomenon. Writers who wrote little or nothing about anything except Ireland and yet who felt so stifled in their native land that they had to go elsewhere to write, free and untrammelled. Shaw went to England; Joyce to Switzerland; Colum to the United States. And now Colum has written his first novel which is considerable news in any year.

As a matter of fact he did try a novel once before—in his youth—and it was so bad it has taken him 50 years to get over it. Meanwhile, as a critic and as a collector of Irish myth and legend he has become an important literary figure.

The Flying Swans which is the title of the new novel draws heavily from the deep knowledge of Irish lore which Padraic Colum possesses. The story is almost Victorian in plot.

Its central character is a boy, growing to young manhood, in Ireland. The father was a visionary who deserted the poor mother who first had to go home to her father and then set herself up as a small shopkeeper in a small Irish market town. She is the stock, sad figure of the deserted wife, struggling along to bring her poor boys up decently.

The road is long and hard; relations are callous and brutal; friends are unfeeling; the rich grind down the poor and misfortune dogs the brave but struggling family.

On the surface, this should make for a dull sad tale—but what saves it is the same ingredient which all the members of the Irish Renaissance learned about long since. What they found was that, seen through the fresh eyes of the creative artist, Ireland was a distinct and fascinating land. In the minutiae of its daily life, in the national character, in the race memory and the race poetry there was the stuff which makes great drama, great poetry, great fiction.

INTANGIBLE
This is the material which Padraic Colum uses in The Flying Swans. Material, is, perhaps, the wrong word. It is an essence, a strong and pervading intangible quality which colors the entire story.

This, of course, is what any truly national literature must have. It is not a matter of geography. The writer can live and work anywhere. It is not a matter of money either. Some of the greatest of the Irish writers lived near starvation. Others, more enterprising, went to other lands and made livings for themselves. But, no matter what, their inspiration came from Ireland.

It is this object lesson which impresses me these days as we find ourselves in this country on the threshold of the Canada Council era. I see that their first grants have gone to two theatrical enterprises—Le Theatre du Monde and the Canadian Players, an offshoot of the Stratford Festival. The significant thing about these organizations is that they have generated their own steam. The Council is absolutely right to help them along and I think they will get great value for their investment.

Beltin' Bayer Bounces To Top of Open Parade

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Gi-Caspe of Bonita, Calif., four gantic George Bayer, the longest ahead of Doug Ford of Mahopac, N.Y., and five up on Joe Conrad of San Antonio, Tex.

The big question now facing the 31-year-old power hitter is whether he can hold No. 1 spot and step to the winner's rostrum late today to accept the $3,500 first-place money or fold in the stretch. His record says he'll fold.

The six-foot-five, 240-pound red-head from Los Angeles powered his way to a record-equalling 61 Friday and the top rung of the 11-under-par 202 after 54 holes. He holds a three-stroke lead over Bill

The Packard was splitting the black Montana night at something like 70 miles an hour when the lights went out. It was a strange sensation, trying to estimate how much the unseen road curved while the car skidded to a stop. If memory serves right, it was a close call. But at the time, it was just something else to laugh about.

A bit of tinfoil replaced the burned-out fuse and we went on our way again—Murray Patrick to the training camp of the Philadelphia Ramblers' hockey club and I to a six-day bicycle race in Buffalo.

That was too many years ago. They were good days for Muzz and life held no complications. The only things he appeared to worry about were keeping in condition and figuring ways to excel in whatever sport he was tackling at the time.

Everything was for laughs. Muzz even enjoyed that night in Edmonton when he climbed off the canvas three times in the first round, spat the blood out of his mouth and belted Empire champ Tommy Osborn out in the second canto to win the Canadian heavyweight crown in the fourth fight of his brief boxing career.

He managed a grin in the Victoria Y that morning when he came out of our impromptu wrestling match with a shoulder separation, just as he had grinned when father Lester told him he didn't have a chance to make the big time in pro hockey.

Even Then, Murray Knew What He Wanted

They were carefree days, and on the surface it appeared Muzz was prepared to let the future take care of itself. But even then he knew what he wanted.

He was determined to play in that National Hockey League and he wanted to manage the New York Rangers. He made the grade on both counts, stepping into a regular defence spot with the Rangers in the 1938-39 season and taking over the manager's desk two years ago after a season and a half of coaching the Broadway Blues.

Watching Murray when he was making sports headlines in Victoria it would have been difficult to believe he would have his biggest struggle with the muscular end of hockey.

An indifferent stick handler and an unimpressive skater, he reached the NHL mostly on determination and his ability to make the right moves on defence. He never threatened to set any playing records, but the new look of the Ranger organization indicates he may still make a big contribution to hockey history.

The Rangers are on the move. And they have a wealth of young talent coming up on three of their junior farm clubs—Flin Flon Bombers, the Memorial Cup champions; Guelph Biltmores and Prince Albert Mintos—to keep them going.

Rangers Headed for Top Rung of Ladder

At least three members of the Flin Flon club will probably be with the Blues this season and Muzz, visiting Victoria on a trip that is "partly business but 90 per cent vacation," thinks the Rangers will be on the top rung of the NHL ladder in two or three years.

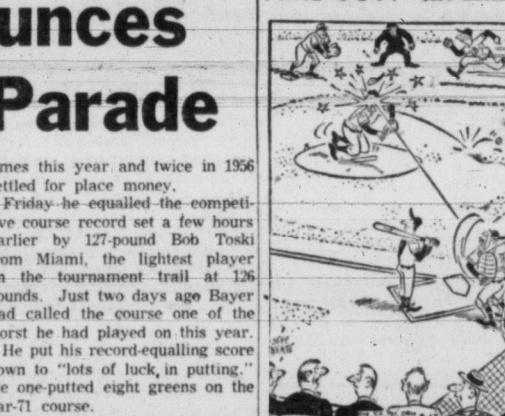

"You've got to consider Andy a star," says Muzz. "He's scored over 20 goals in each of his first two seasons and he's a real two-way player. We can use him in any situation, on the power plays or as a penalty-killer, and we hope he'll be with us for a long time."

Jack Bionda? "Jack may have to work hard to polish up his skating and stick-handling, but he has what it takes to be a great defence-man. We'd like to have him, but it looks like he has a good future with the Bruins."

The Rangers? "We've got a young club that's bound to improve. The Rangers will be right on top in two or three years and I want to win the Stanley Cup within four years."

And knowing Murray Patrick, this corner says that if he wants the Stanley Cup, he's going to get it.

TIME OUT! JEFF KEATE

"That give you an idea on how weak we are behind the plate? He's our first-string catcher!"

EARLY STARS FADE

Bayer barged ahead of three players who went into Friday's round tied for first place. They were Ford, Freddie Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., and Henry Ransom, 46-year-old pro from St. Andrews, Ill., who finished 54 holes tied at 136.

Ford shot a one-under-par 70. Hawkins and Ransom blossomed to a 72 for a 208 total.

Also tied at 208 are Gerry Kresling of Toronto, Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Don Fairlie of Casey, Ill., Bo Winger of Odessa, Tex., and Pat Schwab of Dayton, Ohio.

Second leading Canadian is Johnny Henrick of Ottawa who posted a 70 Friday for a 209 total, tied with Ken Venturi of San Francisco.

Moe Norman, the exuberant Kitchener-born shotsmith who shot a three-under-par 68 Thursday, went over regulation figures for the first time in the tournament with a 72 and a 210 total, tied with three Americans—Arnold Palmer, Latrobe, Pa., Ted Rhodes, St. Louis, Mo., and Gay Brewer, Cincinnati.

It's not hard to figure why Gorge Hotel is on top of the Senior "A" Men's Softball League and why Half Way is second, if you take a look at the league's batting and pitching records.

Half Way House has the edge at the plate, placing five among the top 10 batters, but Gorge is ahead on the mound with Ed Foychuk boasting an 8-1 record and Dave Price clipping along at 6-2. Half Way's Stan Wargo is right in the middle with seven wins and two losses.

Duncan Mayos' Jim Peterson tops the hitters with a lofty .451 mark.

Match Pace of Year Ago On 14th in Row Over A's

By the Associated Press
Unimaginative bunch these New York Yankees. They change a few names in the cast every now and then, even get into a pip of a scramble for the American League lead once in a while—but day by day, year by year, it's the same old stuff.

Take today, July 13. They've played 79 games, stand 53-26, have won six in a row, lead by four games and have lost only four of their last 28 games.

On July 13, 1956, they had played 79 games, stood 53-26, had won six in a row, led by 7½ and had lost six of their last 28.

This is progress? On July 13, 1955, they had played 84 games, stood 58-26, and led by 11½. After 79 games that year, they were 52-27, led by 5½.

Casey Stengel's chills made it 14 in a row (13 this year) over Kansas City Friday night, with a 4-2 victory on a three-run homer by Harry Simpson, late of the A's. That gave Yankees their largest lead of the season, what with Chicago's second-place White Sox made idle by rain.

Baltimore dipped back to sixth place, losing 8-6 at Cleveland as the Indians gained a share of fourth place with Deat Nanaimo tonight, Victoria's Pee-wee Bradshaw will be attempting to consolidate second-place position in Inter-City Lacrosse League scoring race. Shamrocks lead T-men by two points, can step into four point lead with win tonight.

The win moved Salmonbellies within two points of runner-up Nanaimo and four behind Victoria's pace-setting Shamrocks, who meet Timbermen at Nanaimo tonight.

The Salmonbellies opened quickly and took a 2-1 lead in the first period but the Pils came back to tie it 2-2 with the only goal of the second session.

Veteran Bert Houston scored the winning goal for New Westminster, his second of the night, at 12:44 of the final period. Other Salmonbellies' goals came from Bob Lee, Rudy Roisinger, Val Robertson, Doug McRory, Ken Oddy and Mario Crema.

For Vancouver, the scorers were Bill Barbour, Ron Hemmerling, Alec Carey, Fred Usselman, Don Salter and Bill Chisholm.

Both teams were without several key players and as a result failed to settle down. The contest was marred by poor passing and scrambling play.

Italian Takes Light-Heavy Title

MILAN, Italy (AP)—Artenio Calzavara, husky 29-year-old Italian coal miner, Friday night won the European light-heavyweight boxing title when he defeated the veteran German champion, Gerhard Hecht, in a 15-round bout before a crowd of 18,000.

The bout was so close that the Italian challenger was uncertain at the end whether he had won. As the final bell sounded, Calzavara restarted for his own corner only to be stopped by French referee Andre Esparragueria, who raised the Italian's hand in token of victory.

Pass the Peanuts...To Somebody Else

Belief in good omens and lucky charms has been with the human race since the dark ages. It is only natural, therefore, that superstition has a strong hold on stock car drivers.

If there is a driver at Western Speedway who doesn't believe in Lady Luck, he's unknown to track officials.

As one driver explains it, "winning depends 50 per cent on driving ability and mechanical skill. The other 50 per cent depends on luck. If you haven't got it, then you won't be moving into the winner's circle too often."

These drivers will leap for a straw if they feel there's a good omen attached to it. They'll shy like a skittish colt at any bad sign.

Dice, the color green and peanuts... this non-related combination is on the list of "taboo" items. Drivers would blow a fuse if anybody was caught eating peanuts around their favorite car and dropping the shells onto any part of the machine.

Green is extremely unpopular, but there's always one to flaunt the rules. Nanaimo's Harry Roberts, for example, drives a green car (with peanut shells) and his favorite number is 13.

Drivers prefer to keep the same number year after year. The top 10 drivers, however, must use numbers that indicate their point standing of the previous season.

If they can't take the number of their choice, drivers will often "purchase" the number from the stock car club. Digger O'Dell, for example, must "wear" No. 6 but the current king at the Langford oval bought his favorite 88 in order that it would not fall into other hands.

Digger, incidentally, frowns on shaving before a race. Yet he turned up clean-shaven last week and promptly went on to score the first clean sweep in track history.

Everything seems to have a meaning. Dick Varley was quick to tear an ornament off his jalopy, installed only the week before, because of an accident at the next race.

That rabbit's foot, the green No. 13 and O'Dell, unshaven, will all be on hand at Western Speedway tonight when the regular weekly meet is staged. Time trials start at 7:30 and the opening heat is at 8.

Alberni Aces Toss in Scare

City Tennis Event Winds Up At Victoria Club on Sunday

Port Alberni entrants in the men's singles events of the Victoria city hard court tennis championships came near to upsetting the odds-makers Friday evening at Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club.

Bob Peskett of Port Alberni proved to be a real handful for second-seeded Ted Smythe in their quarter-finals match as he took the Victoria courtman to three hard sets before going down 3-6, 8-6, 6-2.

After taking the first set, Peskett moved into a 4-2 lead in the second. The match went to 5-4 before Smythe caught fire to bring the count to deuce and then won two games in a row to break the skein.

Fourth-seeded Reidar Getz also ran into trouble in disposing of a Port Alberni opponent when Werner Forster came back strongly, after dropping the first set 6-1, to make a rubber set necessary with a 10-8 win over the Victoria junior. Getz again took over in the final set to advance into the semifinals with a 6-4 win.

ALEX MOVING
Alex Stencil, dark-horse entrant and former European star who went into the tourney unseeded, continued in his winning ways as he downed Art Ngai 6-2, 6-2 following his Thursday upset of third-seeded Warren Cameron.

Getz will play top-seeded Ron Mitchell in the semis and Stencil will face Smythe as they try for final round berths.

Maxine Ellis and Vi Pearson advanced to the semifinal round in the Women's Doubles event Friday when they downed A. Cooke and B. Parrish 6-0, 6-3, and will meet top-seeded Sharon Whittaker and Wendy Cox as they try for the finals.

Other Ladies' Doubles action saw Pam Ferguson and Myra Peterson edge B. and J. Woolson 6-2, 5-7, 6-3 while in the Mixed Doubles Warren Cameron and Miss Ferguson defeated Mel Chapman and Vi Pearson 6-1, 6-1 and Carl Brand and Myra Peterson beat Gordie Elder and Bev Parrish 6-3, 6-4 to advance into the semifinals.

All semifinals and final matches have been scheduled for Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club courts and tournament officials stated Friday night that there would be no admission charged for visitors who wish to watch the matches.

NAIL-CHEWING BUSINESS

Fighting to stay out of National League's second division, every game is a grim, nail-chewing business for Brooklyn Dodgers. Stars Look Bright In Select Company

BY THE UNITED PRESS

The way Hollywood Stars are playing, you'd think they wanted to win the Pacific Coast League pennant this year.

Hollywood battered leading San Francisco into helplessness for the third straight time Friday, galloping over the Seals 7-0 behind the superb pitching of George Witt.

Witt allowed the league's power hitters a measly four hits—while the Stars collected 14, including a three-run homer by Paul Pettit that took away what steam remained in the San Francisco effort. Witt's record is now 9-4.

In other games, Vancouver slid by league doormat Sacramento, 10-0; Portland finally broke a 13-game loss streak by downing San Diego, 6-5, and Seattle outthrew and outlasted Los Angeles, 6-5, in an 11-inning contest.

The Sacramento-Vancouver game was a tense, exciting contest with the Solons giving up only three hits—just one too many—while Vancouver let go of two. The one run came in the fourth frame when Kal Segrist homered. Mel Held got the win, Roger Bowman the loss.

The 2,275 fans in Portland's Multnomah Stadium received a thrill when their seventh-place club came from behind with five runs in the fifth inning to go ahead—and stay ahead—of a very tough San Diego team.

Rudy Regalado smashed out his seventh homer of the year for San Diego in the top of the fifth.

Los Angeles, defenders in the league, got its back off the mat to down Seattle two days ago, only to be slammed back down again Friday. But even so, it was tough and went until the 11th when Joe Taylor won the game with a bases-empty homer, his 19th of the year. Taylor also tied the game in the eighth with a double followed by Hal Bevan's single.

Taylor's homer was one of four for the Suds. The others were made by Bill Glynn, Bevan, and Ray Orteig. Los Angeles got into the home run column when Jim Fridley pounded one out in the fourth frame.

Officials Return Favor By Squawking at Pros

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—The Royal Canadian Golf Association sought some assurance Friday that if the 1958 Canadian Open is held in Edmonton there will be a proper representation from the touring pros on hand.

At the same time, the RCGA executive, meeting in closed session, moved to have squawking pros, both American and Canadian, spanked for complaining about the Westmount course.

The Edmonton question was laid before Ed Carter, tournament co-ordinator for the Professional Golfers' Association of America. Carter agreed to talk things over with the players' committee and report later today to the RCGA.

Travelling distance is the big concern so far as Edmonton is concerned. Presumably the tour would swing into Canada from St. Paul, Minn. To travel by car from St. Paul to Edmonton would be roughly 1,400 miles. From there the next jump would be to Vancouver, another 1,000 miles or so, for the big $40,000 Open to be held there in 1958.

QUESTION OF FLYING

With 2,400 miles entailed—let alone any further jump into the northwestern states following Vancouver—there would be posed the matter of the players flying instead of using cars.

It is not unusual for many of the touring pros to fly from one city to another in case of an unusually long trip. Sometimes players' wives drive the cars on, and there is a doubling up later of player-passengers.

Gar Luch, a director of the Mayfair Club in Edmonton, is in Kitchener for the current Canadian Open trying to help iron out arrangements that would ensure a bang-up show for the 1958 Open there.

The spanking of the complaining pros was turned over by the RCGA to both the PGA and the CPGA, with the request that the players be censured.

SOME PLAYERS CRITICAL

The howling arose after the first round of this tournament. Others said they found it satisfactory. The uproar, nevertheless, brought about a decision by the tournament committee to have the fairways and greens cut. As a further move to make the course inviting, the pines were placed in preferred positions. The belly-aching ended when sub-par scores broke loose the next day.

The RCGA in a statement by president C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville of London, Ont., said "it was considered these statements were unconsidered and ill-advised" and also "such remarks were considered detrimental to the interest of the game and also do not represent the general viewpoint of the players."

Accordingly, the RCGA asked both the PGA and the CPGA to ensure the members concerned in both organizations.

Brave Players On Injured List

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Shortstop Felix Mantilla and centre-fielder Billy Bruton of the Milwaukee Braves will return to Milwaukee for further examination of injuries suffered Thursday night in a collision during a game with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

An examination Friday by the Pirates' physician showed each suffered "badly bruised right knees."

KINS, FARMERS SHARE FEATURE SPOT TONIGHT

Farmer Construction, running headlong into the tough Seattle Hi-Rainers in a twin-bill today, step aside tonight to share the Royal Athletic Park floodlights with Vic-Van Isle Kinsmen and the Seven Oaks Home.

The Kinsmen, in co-operation with Victoria's entry in the Northwest International Baseball League, are staging a bout of entertainment in aid of the home for Starved children.

Kinsmen Kiwans will tackle Press-Radio All-Stars in a baseball attraction to launch this evening's proceedings at 7:30 p.m. The Seattle-Victoria clash follows at 8.

Several door prizes will be distributed between innings.

Stewards Crack Down On Careless Riding

NEW YORK (AP)—Jockey Bill Boland was suspended Thursday for 10 days for permitting his mount, Table For Two, to cross over and interfere with Bright Coronet and Little Skipper in the sixth race at Belmont Park Wednesday. The suspension becomes effective Saturday.

There was a double disqualification in the race, with Browse Awkile, who had finished first, being dropped to third for coming in sharply on Bright Coronet near the finish.

AUSSIE STARS, TOO!

Big Splash Set For Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—Swimmers from half way around the world will gather here this month in the biggest international swimming meet to be held in Canada since the British Empire Games in 1954.

They're All Picking on Poor Pancho

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Pancho Gonzales of Los Angeles capitulated late Friday in his cross-country row with promoter Jack Gramer and announced he would fly to New York to play today in the Tournaments of Champions.

"My attorney advised me to go back and play. There is no formal agreement about my disagreement with Gramer. We decided our talks about money on the tour will be resumed when we all come back to Los Angeles for the tournament here."

"I can't beat down my attorney and everybody else so I'm going back," Gonzales said, disconsolately.

Pancho said he had argued against playing in the New York tournament, but his attorney persuaded him to compete. His financial controversies with Gramer will, he hopes, be settled later out here.

"I hope they'll see things my way," Pancho concluded. Earlier, Gramer had given up on Pancho's playing.

At Forest Hills, Gramer said he was inclined to tell Gonzales to "take a running jump in a lake." "This is ridiculous," Gramer said. "Now he wants to come here on our terms. He knew he didn't have a chance legally. I'm taking a poll of the players to see if they want him."

The event is the Canadian open swimming and diving championships, to be held at the Empire Pool at the University of British Columbia, July 25-27.

At the moment, the Dolphin Swim Club of Honolulu is the most distant point to send entries. But all major Canadian clubs as well as clubs from Washington, Oregon and California will compete.

Two of Australia's brightest stars—Lorraine Crapp and Dawn Fraser—will be competing in California just prior to the Canadian event and say they will try to work it into their schedule.

Officials said Empire Village, which housed athletes during the Games, will again be in operation and will accommodate 150 swimmers. Others will be billeted in private homes as well as hostels.

Canada's Irene McDonald, who was third in the 1956 Olympic springboard diving in Melbourne, Australia, is coming west from Hamilton to train for the event. Miss McDonald will train at Kelowna, B.C., under coach, Dr. George Athanas.

Bill Patrick, Empire Games diving champion from Calgary, now attending Ohio State University, has been practising daily at the Empire Pool. He specializes in the 10-meter tower diving.

Vancouver representatives will include Helen Stewart, Margaret Iwasaki, Susan Sangster, Margaret Peebles, Bill Slater and Bill Jack.

Willie's Injury Not Serious

CHICAGO (AP)—Injured Bill Hartack, leading U.S. jockey, will return to riding a lot earlier than first expected after a spectacular spill Wednesday at Arlington Park damaged his spine.

Latest study of X-rays showed that a "wing" of a vertebra in the small part of the back had been fractured. At first doctors thought the vertebra itself had been broken and said he would be sidelined for as long as four months.

"After studying new spot pictures, the injury is not real serious," said Dr. Paul Tobin, one of the attending physicians. "One of the wings of the vertebra in the small of the back is fractured. He will need no cast and it will depend a lot on how Hartack feels himself when he will resume racing."

Chiefs Lose $8,000

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—Kamloops Chiefs hockey team in the Okanagan-Senior League lost $8,282 in its first season last year but owner Kenny McKenzie says he is not discouraged.

The club spent $64,236 and took in $55,944 at 33 home games. One of the big expenditures was $30,610 for salaries.

Bomber Making Some Headway

YUMA, Ariz. (AP)—A spokesman for the Joe Louis Income Tax Fund said Thursday the U.S. treasury department has stopped charging interest on the former champion's tax debt.

The Brown Bomber now owes an estimated $2,500,000 in tax and interest. The one-time world heavyweight boxing champion has taken to wrestling matches, refereeing boxing and other enterprises to pay off the huge debt.

Kenneth E. Porter of Phoenix, Ariz., a tax expert who donates his time to the group, said the department agreed to stop the accruing interest pending a review of the situation and study of a compromise settlement proposal.

Going To Be Busy

MONCTON (CP)—Yvon Durelle, Canadian and British Empire light-heavyweight boxing king, will meet Chubby Wright of Reading, Penn., in Glace Bay, N.S., July 27.

Chris Shaban, Durelle's manager, also announced he is making every effort to get a match here in August with James J. Parker, Canadian heavyweight champion. Durelle is ranked fourth in world light-heavyweight ratings.

Vancouver Island Viewpoint

Investigation

SIDNEY REVIEW — Hata off to His Worship Mayor Percy Scourah of the capital city of Victoria. He's doing his level best to speed the development of his own municipality and, as a by-product of his endeavors, he's indirectly boosting the stock of Sidney and North Saanich as well.

Residents of this district were impressed with the plea carried by Mayor Scourah to the heads of the CNR, asking for fast ferry service between the Peninsula and the Mainland. And they were equally as appreciative of his efforts bent towards lengthening of the runway at Patricia Bay airport. And also pressure he is exerting aimed at construction of a modern administrative building at the airport.

All these appeals have value. They serve to keep the federal government spotlight trained on the Peninsula. And it's the squeaking wheels which get the grease.

Good Neighbors

COWICHAN LEADER—A joint meeting of the city and Indian councils in Duncan last week is a milestone in the development of a more enlightened understanding of each other's problems.

A wide range of topics was covered. In fact, it was a surprise to both parties that such close neighbors all these years have both been moving along the road of progress, sharing common interests and exposed to the same pitfalls.

The liquor problem, as was to be expected, came in for some serious treatment. The Indians came out of the discussion with flying colors. It being clearly shown that the whites are hardly in a position to throw stones and also that the insobriety of a few gives all Indians a bad name. This did not remove the problem of how to improve present drinking habits but at least it brought out into the open the whole vexed question.

Aluminum Cans

LADYSMITH CHRONICLE — Maybe we won't have to wait for human nature to improve to see a reduction in the unsightly and illicit garbage dumps around this district. According to the Financial Post two American firms are developing seamless aluminum cans which will have salvage value. Increases in steel and tinplate prices have made these new cans commercially economical.

Considering the millions of tin-plated steel cans which are used once then thrown away, the new aluminum cans would halt an appalling waste of metal.

Small-City Shoppers Won't Walk

NANAIMO—Shoppers in a city the size of Nanaimo will not walk more than two and one-half blocks from their car to a store, according to an economic and industrial survey made by J. B. Ward and Associates.

In smaller towns they will walk only one and one-half blocks, said Lloyd Gray, of the survey firm, while in Vancouver they will walk an average of 3.6 blocks from a parking space.

"The parking problem in a small city is a real sticker," Mr. Gray said.

Nanaimo Builder Gets Parkville Reservoir Job

PARKVILLE — Contract for construction of a new water system reservoir and pump house has been awarded to A & B Construction Co., Nanaimo, which submitted a bid of $12,464.

A by-law has been passed to proceed with the project, designed to increase the water supply by retaining water now lost because of overflow at the pump site.

307 PLEDGE BLOOD IN CHEMAINUS DRIVE

CHEMAINUS—Kinsmen have obtained a total of 307 pledges for the annual blood donor clinic to be held in the Legion Hall July 25.

Instead of canvassing door to door for pledges as they have in the past, Kinsmen this year made their canvass by telephone. A team of club members kept three phones busy for a week in completing the appeal for pledges.

The hospital auxiliary, in charge of the clinic, will mail out clinic appointment cards this week.

JUNIOR JUDGES TAKE HONORS

Ability in judging quality of cattle and goats has won a trip to Toronto and a gold watch, respectively, for Joe Taylor, 18 (left) and John Howe, holding kid. They topped 73 entrants from other B.C. farm areas at 4H Club contests at UBC and were first Saanichton champs. Cattle expert Joe will attend national 4H Week gathering in Toronto Nov. 15. He has left school for the farm. John, 17, takes grade 10 correspondence course also while staying "down on the farm." Boys raise calves, kids, yearlings as personal projects.—(Times photo by Strickland)

RCMP report it is believed he died of natural causes, but an inquest will be held.

The body was removed to Westwood funeral home in Nanaimo.

ISLAND DIGEST

THREE ESCAPE SINKING SHIP

TOFINO (CP) — Rescuers dragged two men from the water while a third swam ashore when the troller Jessie R. sank in a strong ebb-tide near government wharf here Friday.

Minutes after the ship struck the wharf a lifeboat pulled John Watts to safety, the troller Storm rescued David Imbach, while skipper Ben Welch of Port Alberni, a strong swimmer, made his own way back to the wharf.

The boat was swept 1,000 yards out to sea before it sank.

Appeal Set On Impaired Driving Count

NANAIMO (CP) — H. Ross McClure will appeal his conviction in police court and sentence of 30 days in jail on a charge of impaired driving.

McClure told Magistrate Lionel Beever-Potts he could not pull off the Island Highway when he heard the siren of an approaching police car because oncoming traffic was too heavy.

He also asked how he could have been impaired when, after his arrest, the police turned over his car to a passenger who had exactly the same number of drinks. He said each had four glasses of beer in Nanaimo before starting for Nanaimo on a fishing trip.

Bail for McClure has been set at $500, plus $75 security.

No Hits, No Runs, No Errors

PORT ALBERNI—RCMP investigating a resounding boom at Eighth Avenue school grounds found a group of youthful experimenters and what remained of a home-made bomb.

They had filled a souvenir hand-grenade casing with powder they made themselves, then placed it behind the baseball backstop and fired it off.

There were no injuries, no damage and no arrests.

3,000-Seat Bowl Features $20,000 Courtenay Project

COURTENAY—B.C. Centennial Committee has approved a $20,000-plus project to establish exhibition facilities in Comox Valley, Centennial Park.

The 18,000 people of the valley, that includes Courtenay, Comox, Cumberland, Royston, Tsolum, Sandwick, Dove Creek, Puntledge, Bevan, and other communities, will spend the $10,000 provincial grant and their own matching amount on the project.

Facilities will be of the type that can be used in conjunction with the annual fall fair here, and other events throughout the year.

SEAT 3,000

They will include a Tye Bowl which will seat up to 3,000 persons, an Indian lodge and museum, picnic site, a Centennial arch, museum of agriculture and industry, and other features.

Buildings bought from the Crown now are being moved to Centennial Park by Heaney's who are using the largest timbers available for the job. Four separate moves will be required.

Archib Dick, Tsolum High School teacher, has been appointed temporary manager of the fall fair, to be held in September. Directors of the fair will name a permanent manager during the fair.

Family to Take Part In Memorial Ceremony

LADYSMITH (CP)—Mrs. W. C. Impett will be flown to Fairbanks, Alaska, Tuesday to attend the dedication of a memorial to her brother, the late Col. Ben Eielson.

She will be joined by three sisters and two brothers in the flight from McChord field in Tacoma.

Col. Eielson lost his life in Alaska while on a mercy flight. The dedication will be held next Saturday at the Eielson Air Force Base.

Troller Damage Light After Island Grounding

TOFINO—Damage to the Victoria troller Pacific Maid II, that went aground Thursday on Wickaninnish Island, was found to be light after examination here.

Transport department lifeboat crew went to the aid of the vessel, but was unable to move it until the tide rose. It then towed the troller to safety here.

FISHERMAN, 68, FOUND UNHURT ON ROCKY ISLE

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — A 68-year-old fisherman, missing 12 hours when his storm-battered troller sank, was found on a rocky island 10 miles north of here.

Search officials at first feared Tom Wallbank, Heriot Bay, Quadra Island, had drowned after his 24-foot craft smashed ashore on Read Island.

But he told RCMP Friday he managed to leap ashore before his boat was swept out by heavy seas and sank in 30 feet of water.

Monday Closing Wins In N. Cowichan Vote

CHEMAINUS — Merchants in the municipality of North Cowichan this week voted by a slight margin in favor of Monday closing. The municipality sent out 75 ballots to licence holders affected by the new Municipal Act and 45 were returned. Of these 20 were in favor of Monday closing, 17 for Wednesday, four for Thursday, one each for Tuesday and Saturday, one for seven days a week, and one for "any day."

After considerable discussion, members of council concluded Monday was not a clear-cut majority of the 45 votes sent in. It was still a preference vote for Monday.

While the majority of merchants voted for all-day Monday closing, it was pointed out that the new act provides for half-day closing only.

A by-law covering half-day Monday closing in the municipality was introduced and given first reading. It will become effective in September.

Chemainus Library Open Through Summer

CHEMAINUS — The Chemainus Branch of the Vancouver Island Regional Library will remain open through the summer months this year, librarian Mrs. Betty Doumont announced today.

The library here is the only permanent branch in the municipality.

LOK SAM

MISS POPSEAM, I COMPLETELY AGREE WITH BOTH 'TIME' AND 'LIFE' THAT YOU ARE INDEED THE LONE GODDESS OF THE 20TH CENTURY.

BUT IN ALL THE MASS MOVEMENTS OF HISTORY, THERE HAVE ALWAYS BEEN ONE OR TWO REBELS. I AM ONE OF THOSE MODERN TWO.

"TWO?"

WHY, YOU'RE THE ONLY MAN IN THE WORLD WHO EVER TURNED ME DOWN!

NO, MISS POPSEAM, THERE IS ANOTHER—MR. PERFECT.

YOU CRAZY, OR SOMETHING? PERF IS MAD ABOUT ME! I JUST LEFT HIM WITH THAT LONG SAM GIRL TO BE WITH YOU.

HE WANTED TO BE WITH THAT GIRL, THAT'S WHY HE DELIBERATELY LOST THE FIGHT.

AND THAT'S WHY I MUST LEAVE YOU NOW. I WANT TO BE WITH HER, TOO.

BUT 'LIFE' SAYS I'M THE 20TH CENTURY LOVE GODDESS! IT SAYS RIGHT HERE THAT NO GIRL ON EARTH IS AS MADLY DESIRED AS I AM!

I GUESS THEY DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT HER WHEN THEY WROTE THAT ABOUT ME --

ARCHAEOLOGIST LOOKS TO FUTURE...

Victoria May Rival Old Glory of Greece

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Centuries from now archaeologists will dig for the remains of old buildings in Victoria just as today they are plumbing the ruins of ancient Athens for evidence of a once-powerful civilization.

"But I hope Victoria will have a much longer life than Athens," says Dr. Homer Thompson, one of the world's leading archaeologists and, at 50, one of the pleasantest pedagogues it is possible to meet.

In Victoria today, Dr. Thompson is an inspiring figure of Canadian scholarship—a Chilliwack boy whose love of ancient Greece has made him a world authority on his subject.

With his wife and twin daughters, Hilary and Hope, he is now visiting his aunt, Mrs. Evan McQueen, at 973 Falkland Road. He last came to Victoria in 1949.

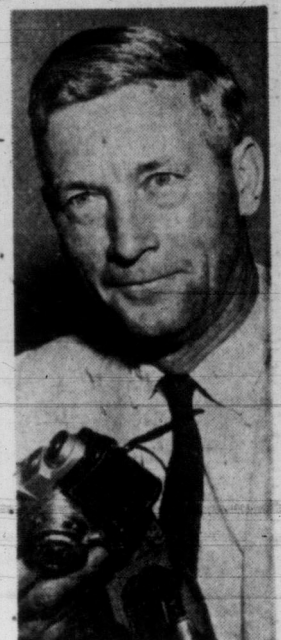

From the University of British Columbia his quest for knowledge took him to the leading universities of North America and to Athens, where he began excavating in 1931. Last month he turned over to the Greek government a monumental piece of history—a reconstruction of the Stoa of King Attalos as it appeared a century before Christ.

The job of reconstruction took five years and cost almost $2,000,000, half of it contributed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

What is a stoa? Dr. Thompson described it as the most characteristic public building in ancient Greece—a long shed-like structure almost resembling a modern railway station and built entirely of marble and stone.

The greatest philosophers of the age taught in these buildings—St. Paul, Socrates, Zeno, Diogenes and others.

DR. HOMER THOMPSON
... "One day Victoria will be ancient."

'Chain Stoas' in Ancient Greece

The Stoa of Attalos, built in 150 B.C., stood in the centre of Athens bordering the market place and St. Paul preached within its walls.

"It was the type of building that Socrates used centuries before—before he was put to death by poisoning in 399 B.C."

Dr. Thompson recalls that not long ago a woman tourist approached him in Athens and said: "Tell me, Doctor, did they have Super Markets in ancient Greece?"

"No madam," he replied, "but it would be quite accurate to say they had Chain Stoas."

Recreation of the Stoa of Attalos dates from a day in 1948 when a woman archaeologist jokingly suggested that Dr. Thompson should reconstruct it as a public museum.

The Canadian scholar took her seriously and from then on all his knowledge and industry were focussed on what he regarded as his greatest challenge.

King Gave Generously to Education

Dr. Thompson finds a modern corollary in the fact that King Attalos gave generously to the knowledge he had gained there.

"In the same fashion today men give to the University of British Columbia in return for what it has given them."

Dr. Thompson says his work in Athens is far from complete. There is a corollary task of writing and publishing, at an estimated cost of $200,000, some 20 volumes covering 25 years of research by the American School of Classical Studies in Athens.

Dr. Thompson and his wife, Dorothy—a fellow archaeologist—will write perhaps a third of this work.

The American school is supported by 75 universities in Canada and the U.S. including UBC and the University of Toronto.

"UBC is interested very directly," the doctor said, "and this summer we had a visit from Miss Ann Suberland of the department of classics."

"She was impressed by the fact that, fundamentally, the people who live in Athens today are much like the people of Socrates' time."

All students who have taken a B.A. degree in ancient history or classics at North American universities are eligible to attend the school in Athens, which receives an average of 15 new students every year and normally houses at least 30.

He was remanded in custody until Wednesday.

In city police court today, Carlow pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving without licence plates and was remanded to Monday for trial.

He was brought from custody to face the charge, dating back to 1956, and bail was set at $25 cash. However, he will remain in custody for the RCMP.

Paul G. Cook, RCN, was remanded for election of trial to Monday in city police court.

Carson claims he was beaten and robbed of $110 by three young men. Previously charged were Donald Quaitie, Victoria millworker.

Victoria Kiwanis Club Tuesday will be entertained by members of Eaton's music department. D. Fairne, Tom Austin and Reg Stone will alternate with selections on two Hammond organs.

"Jo-Jo" the raven, has gone missing.

He's the property of Provincial Museum employee and bird lover, Frank Beebe, 4146 Grange, and Mr. Beebe is perturbed about his bird as "he's so utterly tame," and could presumably suffer harm at the hands of persons who do not know Jo-Jo.

Jo-Jo has never had his wings clipped, and has been flying from the Beebe home in the Colquitz area at his own discretion. He's full grown, twice the size of a crow, and doesn't talk.

He's readily identifiable: two of his hind claws are missing.

Mr. Beebe said he was alarmed that children may have found Jo-Jo, who is a social type of bird, and while he's sure the youngsters would treat him all right, he'd like to have Jo-Jo home again.

Among officials are Victoria Highland Games Association president John Noble; marshal of the field, Ian Duncan; vice-president John (Robbie) Robinson; Carl Gibson, Stuart Kennedy, Mrs. James Marrs, John MacNeil, Harold Williams and the chieftain, Alex MacLeod Baird.

One of the highlights of the colorful gathering will be a tri-service sports meet, with individuals and teams from army, navy and air force locking horns.

Piping and dancing, features of all Highland get-togethers, will be an attention-getter. About a half-dozen bands will be massed on the grounds.

Up to this time, however, the government and courts have turned down all appeals.

5-Day Term For Backtalk To Magistrate

A Langford youth who talked back in Colwood RCMP court Friday was arrested and jailed for five days.

Elbert Edward Carlow, 2607 Selwyn, was remanded to Wednesday for trial after pleading not guilty to a charge of failing to report an accident.

He tried to say he didn't think he would be able to make it to court that day, but the case had already been set over and he was waved from the defendant's stand.

Muttered

Leaving the courtroom he muttered in a derogatory tone and before he had taken two steps Magistrate A. I. Thomas leaned forward demanding, "What was that? What was that?"

"What did you say?" echoed Cons. William McKenzie as he stepped forward.

"Put him in the lockup," said the magistrate.

"You're under arrest," said the constable.

"What for?" said Carlow, as he was marched away between two constables.

He was remanded in custody until Wednesday.

In city police court today, Carlow pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving without licence plates and was remanded to Monday for trial.

He was brought from custody to face the charge, dating back to 1956, and bail was set at $25 cash. However, he will remain in custody for the RCMP.

children and all her friends and family, including a brother and sister, are living in the U.S. She has no connections left with Canada.

Since 1952 the case has been before the courts.

Mr. Caughlan attempted to take it before the Supreme Court but was turned down.

Her last chance now appears to be "discretionary relief," by the attorney-general.

And time is running out for Mrs. Wolf.

"She has been an asset to our community in every sense, as has been attested to by her character references; employers and others with whom she has been associated have made affidavits testifying to her abilities and reliability."

Mr. Caughlan said Mrs. Wolf has been his secretary for six years and he had found her to be of excellent character and intelligent.

She has been convicted of no crimes.

PAST AFFILIATION

The deportation order is based solely on a past political affiliation.

Mrs. Wolf has never publicly admitted being a dues-paying member of the Communist party.

If she had been an American citizen she could not be arrested because the party was legal at that time. This privilege is not extended to foreigners, however.

Mr. Caughlan said another aspect under consideration is the possibility Mrs. Wolf may be able to claim dual citizenship under a 1952 U.S. amendment.

If it was established by a court, deportation might be averted.

Up to this time, however, the government and courts have turned down all appeals.

EXPRESSION OF FAITH

'Everlasting' House Built for Eternity

ALCOA, Tenn. (AP)—William Andrew Nicholson is an 80-year-old carpenter who built an everlasting home because he confidently expects to live forever.

It is a fortress-like stone dwelling of 14 rooms and was hand-built by Nicholson and his wife over an eight-year period. It is known locally as "Millennium Manor."

"It cannot rust or rot," said Nicholson, whose keen blue eyes and white hair make him look like a patriarch in a striped sport shirt.

Nicholson is serenely certain that a million years from now he will be happy, alive and content with his house and lot.

His reason is simple. He accepts as a statement of literal fact the Biblical promise that whosoever loves Christ will have everlasting life.

ACCENT ON LIFE "I believe in the Bible, and I believe in life," he said. "I believe in preparing to live instead of preparing to die."

So it was that in 1938 the carpenter and his wife, who discuss "The Master Calls for You."

"What is the Church For?" will be the sermon topic of Rev. C. Leighton Straight at First United Church Sunday morning. Service will be broadcast over CKDA. In the evening, Mr. Straight will begin a series of sermons under the general title "Therefore." First will be "I Believe in Jesus Christ, Therefore..."

Very Rev. J. L. W. McLean, MA, DD, will preach on "Ten Thousand Tyrants" and "Christianity Misunderstood" at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday. Evening service of praise will be led by guest organist William McColl and choral quartet, Peggy Walton-Packard, Mrs. Iris Paver, Robert Husband and John Bray.

Rev. Douglas B. Carr will preach at the morning service in Centennial United Church Sunday, when his subject will be "Above the Clouds."

Communion service will be preached in St. John's Church, Colwood, at 8 a.m., and at St. Matthew's, Langford, at 11 a.m. Evensong will be held at St. John's at 7 p.m.

Rev. Cecil Barner will preach on "The Things of Highest Importance in a Man's Life" and "Hold-up and Robbery on the Highway" at Douglas Street Baptist Church Sunday.

Guest preacher from Morley, Alta., Rev. Edwin Kemppling will preach on "The Transformed Life" at St. Aidan's United Church Sunday morning. There will be no evening services during July.

Dr. W. A. Wicks of Portland, Ore., will speak on "Make Place for the Promise" at the morning service in Victoria Truth Centre, "Director or Producer?" will be his topic at night.

Dr. J. B. Rowell's morning sermon at Central Baptist Church Sunday is entitled "In God's Keeping—Kept: Safe Arrival in Heaven Assured."

At night, he'll speak on "The Friend of Sinners—The Unintentional Tribute to Jesus Christ."

Rt. Rev. D. A. G. Ranklör will preach on "The Miracle of Salvation" at the morning service in the Church of Our Lord Sunday. At evensong his subject will be "Lord, Remember Me..."

Faculty and student representatives from the Canadian Nazarene College, Red Deer, Alta., will take charge of the morning service in First Church of the Nazarene Sunday. Sermon will be preached by Rev. Chester O. Mulder.

DIRECTORS of a new Sunday school, sponsored by Victoria presbytery, Presbyterian Church in Canada, are Miss Flora Whiteford, 1558 Beach, and Theo Ellis, student minister from Vancouver. Opened last week, the school is held in a private home at 3099 Richmond. Later the presbytery hopes to build a church and Sunday school in the new subdivision at Richmond and Lansdowne. YOU SAID TO ME—

By ETHEL TULL
A Sunday message of help and comfort for those puzzled, depressed or low in spirit.

You said to me, "Do children really understand about listening to God and following His guidance?"

In my last writing, I quoted some thoughts from an essay written by a child of 12 years of age on the subject of "Faith, Hope and Charity," but I would like to tell you about a delightful experience we have had with a family of father and mother and three children aged 13, 12, and 9 (two boys and a girl) with whom we lived for two weeks in a very small house.

Every morning, we all gathered in the living room for a family quiet-time. Each of us had a notebook in which to write down the thoughts that came into our minds while listening to God, so that we should not forget to act upon them.

We remembered that no thought coming from Him could be otherwise than absolutely honest, pure, unselfish and loving.

When everybody was ready, we shared our thoughts with each other, so that we could help one another to live up to them.

The Holy Spirit, who Jesus said would teach us all things, was impressing on the minds of the children thoughts of thankfulness for the lovely weather, for the picnic yesterday, for meeting new people.

Instructor Mary Rose Thacker (left) gives some pointers to Janet Stenstrom (centre), 14, 2460 Cardigan Road, and Linda Andrew, 14, Brentwood Bay. Linda enjoys dressmaking as well as skating and makes all her own skating costumes, while Janet is outstanding at track and field.

Summer on Ice, Not Beach, For Young Figure Skaters

IRVING STRICKLAND

Arranged by DEE LAVOIE
Social Department

Lined up and ready to glide off across the ice are, left to right: Paula Barsotti, 12, Great Falls, Mon.; Doreen Speirs, 14, Nelson, B.C.; Louise Samaan, 14, Kamloops, and Kathy Casey, 17, Great Falls. All four are working on their fifth test this summer, more than half way to coveted gold medal standard.

Nearly 100 enthusiastic young figure skaters are spending the summer months at the Victoria Curling Rink at a skating school conducted by Shirley Ingham, Spokane, and Mary Rose Thacker, Victoria. The youngsters will take tests in both set figures and free skating during the course. At left, Linda Barnard, Spokane, most advanced pupil at the school, cuts a perfect circle on the ice as she demonstrates a sit-spin. Linda, 16, is preparing to take her gold medal test in August, top test in figure skating.

Two of the school's youngest pupils are Etelka Murdock, 5 (left), and her sister, Tamara, 4. They have just begun serious figure skating, but both already hold bronze medals in skiing. Smiling encouragement is Susan Cookes, 18, 1560 Despard Avenue, who also has a bronze medal for skiing. She is now working on her sixth skating test.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Smartly-Styled Tartans Here for Autumn Wear

By PENNY SAVER

Seems early to be thinking of fall clothes, but the stores are already getting in stocks of new-season woollens so it's a good time to start looking.

I spotted a new shipment of tartan skirts. They're mostly miniature tartans and very smartly styled, with a plain panel at the front trimmed with tartan-covered buttons and the rest of the skirt finely knife-pleated.

There is Hunting MacKinnon, Ancient Hunting Fraser, Ancient Hunting Hamilton, and many others. Price is $19.95.

Matching weekies featuring tuxedo necklines and the same button trim are $12.75. They're fully lined.

Linen Outfit Wins Machine For Teenager

Sixteen-year-old Sharon Lundquist looked like a fashion model last evening in her beige linen duster and copper-toned sheath dress, which she had made herself for less than $15.

Her dressmaking skill won her first prize of a portable electric sewing machine in Eaton's Junior Miss Dressmaking Contest.

Five finalists were judged for the workmanship, style, suitability and fit of their garments, at a showing in Eaton's fabric department.

Miss Lundquist, who lives at 2738 Foul Bay Road, rushed to phone her family as soon as she had received her prize from merchandising manager Bart Carson.

Other finalists, who received $35 worth of fabric of their choice were: Joyce Dentith, 17, 131 Regina Avenue, who had made a suit of blue celanese with bow jacket lined to match a sleeveless pink print blouse.

Ellen Walsh, 16, 1450 Myrtle Street, who wore her sleeveless pink print dress with plain pink bolero.

Louise Parry, 18, 2617 Belmont Avenue wearing her summer cocktail sheath with crossover neckline and white, cotton and wool stole.

Mary Adkins, 18, 3125 Glasgow Street, in a full-skirted dress of crisp checked gingham.

Commentator for the show was Mrs. Doris Usher, and judges were Mrs. Dorothy Wronowski, social editor of the Daily Colonist, and Miss Dee Lavioie, of the Victoria where I shopped today, give me Daily Times women's department.

HERBS IN THE HOME

Fresh Dill With Cheese Good Sandwich Spread

By PATRICIA RAE

Every morning now I make up cut-lunches for my husband and myself and am having a lot of fun trying to think up new combinations of food. We like brown bread or rye biscuits for our sandwich "bases" and I try to make different ones as much as possible, including daily, one meat sandwich, one cheese and one "sweet."

Some of our favorites are as follows: Cheese-spread with fresh dill on a lettuce leaf; cottage cheese with rosemary; meat paste with chopped chives; honey and raisins (I put the raisins into warm water a few minutes before spreading the sandwich, this makes them soft and plump); date and potato salad; fresh celery with pineapple cheese; marmalade and crisp bacon; lettuce and herb-butter; tomato and dill seed; peanut butter and poppy seed.

Herb Mayonnaise—If you too are a "cut-luncher," you might like to try this with your next lettuce sandwich. Rub to a paste a few sprigs each of chopped watercress and parsley. Add 1 tablespoon chopped mixed herbs, such as chives and tarragon or parsley. Rub till smooth and add 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Add to about 1/2 a cup of mayonnaise. This can also be used with vegetable or fish salads.

"Green" Butter—Parboil 1 ounce each of watercress, tarragon, parsley and spinach leaves. Squeeze out, crush and pound them into a paste together with a teaspoonful paprika. Put into small screw-top of chopped shallots, half a finely chopped gherkin and a few chopped capers, the yolk of a hard-boiled egg and the uncooked yolk of another. Add 1/2 lb. butter and sieve. Season with salt and a little cayenne. Serve this herb-butter with any kind of cooked fish, or spread on large cheese crackers as open sandwiches.

Mustard Sauce (good with egg sandwiches)—Quarter cup French or herb mustard, 3 tbsps. olive oil, 1/2 onion or a few chives, chopped, 1 tsp. wine-vinegar, 2 egg yolks, salt, chopped fresh lovage and sweet marjoram.

"Left Over" Sandwich—Cut into small pieces cold meat or fish. Add chopped cucumber or celery, moisten with mayonnaise; season with fresh chives, parsley or dill. Add a few slices of stuffed olive or gherkin. Cover with buttered bread and lettuce leaf.

IN STEP WITH STYLE

A 'Free-Form' Silhouette; Plunging Necklines News

By Nona Damaske (From New York)

What excitement! Numerous shows by the designers in the ballroom of the Pierre Hotel in this fabulous city of New York; a lovely showing of fabulous watches by watchmakers of Switzerland up in the roof garden and the theatre party to see "New Girl in Town."

I told you in my column last Saturday that I was sure at the end of the first day of the showings that the fall and winter fashion picture would begin to clear—and indeed it has.

"Free form" silhouettes have supplanted the moulded Empire sheath and the soft "fair lady" draperies. There is always an indication of fit in the suits and coats but in the main, they do not hug the body. Collars are stand away—from the neckline and the waistline is loose and easy. Nearly every coat is straight and buttoned—no more loose wrap-type clutch coats.

Sleeves of suits and coats are very often three-quarter. Low placed sleeves make a coat look like a cape from the back, while the front is straight and tailored.

Necks which really bangs at you from all sides as far as dresses are concerned, is the daring new depths in plunging necklines.

There is a great deal of back interest in skirts and bodices and there are many exciting "exit" dresses. Bloused backs, arched back skirts, floating panels, trains and back puffs.

There is fur... fur... fur! What a banner season this must be for the fur trade. There are fur hats, fur bags, coats lined in fur, dresses with fur bodices or circles of fur at the hemline.

If you have any fur that you are not using, you can put it on almost anything and you simply cannot lose.

There is a breath-taking pageant of vivid color but black is away out in front. Much dark brown being shown, too, often combined with black.

I've got a million things to tell you... that is the joy of Press Week. It is so stimulating that you feel you can write reams of copy. But it's 2 a.m. and we have a showing of shoes at 8 a.m. in the Sherry Netherland Hotel so... I'd better get a few hours' sleep!

NAPKIN FOLDING

I would like to know the correct way to fold and place a dinner napkin.

Louise Davis answers:

The open corner when folded should be nearest the handle tip of the fork. Depending on the size, it can be folded into a square or an oblong, just so it has a pleasing proportion. The trend today in the manufacture of dinner napkins is a smaller size than the traditional ones.

Louise Davis but that doesn't mean discarding those we already have. The newer ones fold better into oblong shapes and thus don't take up so much space on the table. If, for example, you have a napkin measuring 15 1/2 inches square, when ironed it is folded in half, then in a square, then once again.

Or, if you prefer, the last folding can be in thirds. For a formal dinner, a square folded napkin is put on each place plate, but, if the napkin is very large, it can be folded so that the length is about three times the width, in which case the two long sides are folded in.

BUT GLAD TO BE HOME AGAIN

Teenager Makes Grade As London Model

Two weeks in the hectic whirl of a London fashion model's life, and 18-year-old Crys Burton was ready to come home to Victoria.

The tall (5'8 1/2"), willowy brunette plunged straight from a Grade 11 classroom at Victoria High School into the gruelling London fashion round.

She left school to fly to England in May to visit her sister, Mrs. Michael Wedick, at Cheam, Surrey, and to revisit Bognor Regis, Sussex, the town where she and her family lived until 1948.

"We went up to London, and I applied for a job at a West End model agency," Miss Burton said as she took her lunch hour at her home, 2620 Richmond Road. "I was accepted and started work next day."

The Victoria teenager, her long hair newly done in a bouffant style and her make-up applied by an expert, found herself parading down a deep-piled carpet in a West End showroom, while critical-fashion buyers watched closely, then rushing out to make split-second costume changes.

NERVOUS AT FIRST

"I was very nervous," Miss Burton admitted, "but after a while I got so tired I forgot to be scared." She obviously did a good job anyway, and she was called for seven more shows in the following two weeks.

But she saw enough of modeling to decide it wasn't quite the glamorous profession she had thought.

"It's uncertain work," she said. "The pay is only 2 guineas ($5.30) a day and you're not sure of working every day."

"The agency takes 10 per cent, and with the cost of always looking smart and of getting from one job to another, I could hardly have made a living," she added.

But she feels it was good experience, and she is hoping to do some modeling here. "I know now I don't want a career as a model," she said, "and I don't want to leave Victoria again."

She flew back by the Polar Route.

Her London trip has reaped her some lovely Bond Street clothes and spike-heeled Italian shoes, as well as make-up technique that is aiding her in her job of selling cosmetics at a Government Street drugstore.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

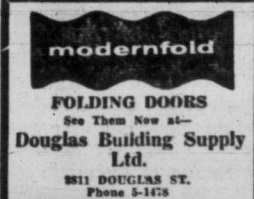

Q. What is the matter with tomato plants when the leaves curl, and potatoes when the blossom fall too soon? Mrs. O. M. Cobble Hill.

A. The curling of leaves on healthy tomato plants usually results from too much nitrogen in the fertilizer, although curling is a natural reaction to cold. The common leaf diseases are septoria leaf spot, water soaked spots progressing from lower leaves upwards in mid-season, and late blight in cool moist weather or late in the growing season.

Both these diseases can be controlled with 4-4-40 Bordeaux mixture. Potatoes and tomatoes are related, and suffer the same leaf diseases, and respond to the same control.

No longer are we able to judge the condition of a potato crop from the flowers. Many of the newer varieties do not set bloom, while others may set a few blooms and shed them almost immediately. Providing the foliage is healthy a good crop should result.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Separating Iris Rhizomes Is Job To Be Done in July

The rainbow of color found in the modern bearded iris is a far cry from the "flags" of grandmother's day, and they play an important part in the perennial border, adding their beauty in June and early summer blooms.

The bearded, or German iris has a fleshy stem called a rhizome (try-zome) at soil level from which the fan of leaves and flower stalk project upwards and the roots extend into the soil.

New rhizomes making a large clump in three or four years with a corresponding decrease in the number of flowers produced. To maintain quality blooms and keep the size of the clump under control, it is necessary to divide and replant after the third year of bloom.

This work must be done soon after this year's flowers are over if the new planting is to become established and flower next season, therefore it is a job to be completed during July.

LIKE DUCKS
After the clump has been dug, the soil is washed from the rhizomes with a strong jet of water, and young, outside rhizomes are selected for replanting. These are severed with a sharp knife at the narrow neck which joins them to the clump.

Planting is the most important point in bearded iris culture. The rhizomes must be at the surface, half in and half out of the soil like a duck floating on water.

Since summer sunbaking of the rhizomes is essential to good flowering, we endeavor to plant with the fan of leaves to the north and the rhizome to the south. Other plants in the border should not shade the iris plants.

The actual planting of bearded iris differs from the planting of other border subjects. To keep the rhizomes from sinking below the surface they must be set on solid soil.

PART ROOTS
This is accomplished by digging two holes side by side, leaving a solid partition of earth between. Into each hole a half-handful of bone meal is thoroughly mixed with the soil.

The roots which project from the rhizome are shortened to four inches if necessary, and then separated so that approximately an equal number will go into each hole, leaving the rhizome on the earth partition.

Firming the soil against the roots will complete the planting. Commercial stocks of iris are dug during July and new varieties should be obtained before the month end.

WEEK'S WORK

Lavender spikes should now be cut for drying.

Take cuttings of cistus (rock rose), hydrangea and azalea in pots. Root in sandy soil mixture in covered cold frame shaded from full sun.

Plant out biennial and perennial seedlings as soon as they become large enough. Shade and water until established.

Give tuberous begonias a weak liquid fertilizer every 10 days.

Chrysanthemums growing in pots outdoors will require water two-three times daily in sunny weather.

Perennial aster (Michaelmas daisy) and phlox require ample water at roots during summer. A little balanced fertilizer before watering the asters will aid in producing larger and better flowers in fall.

Sow stump-rooted carrots, beets, radish, kohlrabi.

Runner beans like a spray of water over foliage and flowers during hot weather.

Expose bulbs of onions to aid in ripening.

Dig narcissus bulbs, and inspect for soundness before September - October planting. Burn those suspected of being diseased. It is the only way to be sure they do not infect your good bulbs.

Butter Output Drops; Stocks On Hand Decline

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's butter production has declined and stocks have been reduced, the bureau of statistics has reported.

Creamery butter production dropped in June to 42,920,000 pounds from 46,072,000 a year ago, reducing the comparative January-June half-year total to 124,589,000 from 137,231,000.

With smaller output, stockpiling declined. Stocks on July 1 totalled 59,156,000 pounds, down from 88,697,000 last year.

Federal agricultural authorities said the production decline was caused partly by a lack of good feed and low butter prices. But the feed outlook now is brighter.

Meat-type hogs can be finished for market in less time and with less feed per pound of gain than lard-type hogs.

This neat and practical room divider adds a decorative touch to both living room and entry hall.

BUILD-IT CORNER

Attractive Divider Has Multiple Uses

By PETER WHITTALL

The open planning of homes today makes extensive use of room dividers.

They separate or define the living and play areas of the home, or the study and dining areas, or the living room and entry hall.

Good dividers serve four distinct and desirable functions—they form a division, add a decorative touch, and provide shelves or cupboards for the rooms or areas on each side.

The entrance-living room divider outlined here has many features to recommend it—to new home owners and amateur carpenters. It can be built on a strip of flooring only 12" wide and less than seven feet long and its construction consists of a series of simple steps that any careful handyman can tackle with confidence.

This divider serves the entry or hall as a coat and overshoe closet, and it provides the dining or living room with overhead shelf space and cupboard storage. In spite of its professional appearance, it has been designed especially for the amateur builder.

It extends to the ceiling to provide the maximum of shelf, cupboard and closet space while still utilizing a minimum of floor space.

The unit is attached to a simple floor frame made with 2x4's or similar sized strips of 3/4" plywood. The frame is six inches wide, half the width of the divider, and it's three inches shorter than the overall length. Thus there is a decorative overhang.

Among many "extra" features, designer Fred Hollingsworth of Vancouver has included a novel and practical way of accommodating full-sized coat hangers. Because the divider is only 12 inches wide, the coat hangers (and the coats) have to be hung lengthwise instead of crosswise.

To make the fullest possible use of the space, the hangers can be attached to kitchen cupboard cup hooks, or short pieces of curtain track can be used, permitting the coat hangers to slide back and forth easily on the drapery track rollers or hooks.

TIME REQUIRED
You can build this room divider in your basement workshop in a few evenings.

A table saw or a radial arm saw will speed up the process, but they are not necessary. The only tools required are a hand saw, hammer, screwdriver and combination mitre square, plus a pencil, tape measure or yardstick and a brace and bit to bore the holes for the light fixture.

For detailed plans of room dividers, see your nearest plywood dealer or write Peter Whittall, in care of Box 335, Vancouver, B.C.

Farms, Vegetable Gardens Face Late Blight in Greater Victoria

Warning was issued today by the plant pathology laboratory of Dominion Experimental Farm at Saanichton.

Dr. William Newton said gardeners can anticipate a sudden and rapid collapse of potato and tomato foliage from the blight, unless spraying is undertaken.

Spray solution should contain fixed copper and zinc, according to manufacturer's instructions.

"Spraying should have started when the plants were six inches high, followed by sprays at two-week intervals. Sprays should cover both the upper and lower parts of leaves. Better late than never. So spray now," said the doctor.

inate from garden rubbish not properly placed in a compost pile, especially old potato tubers and "volunteers."

your roses may be begging for help!

Know these signs of distress—then give quick first-aid treatment for all these insects and diseases with ORTHO Rose Dust.

Contains: captan, lindane, sulfur, ferbam, DDT

APHIS attack and suck the very life out of new shoots and flower buds. Lindane gives excellent control of this most common pest.

BLACK SPOT is a fungus disease spread by wind and rain. Bad infestation even causes leaf drop. Captan, ferbam, sulfur control it.

JAPANESE BEETLES are voracious leaf choppers, but the DDT and lindane in ORTHO Rose Dust knock 'em out.

POWDERY MILDEW turns leaves, buds and stems of plants a sickly, powdery gray. Experts recommend sulfur for powdery mildew.

ROSE SLUGS are small, green pests that look like caterpillars and chew all of the leaves but the veins. DDT controls rose slugs.

THrips, 1/16 of an inch long, puncture buds, causing them to become discolored and fall to open. DDT and lindane stop them.

ROSE RUST is generally revealed by yellowish or powdery pustules on undersides of leaves. Ferbam is the recommended control for rust.

16 WAGONS IN RACE

P M to Hand Trophies To Stampede Winners

CALGARY (CP)—The wildest race of the Calgary Stampede—the chuckwagon race—rumbled into the home stretch today with 16 wagons competing for the championship. In the first five days of racing three horses had to be destroyed.

Two outrider ponies broke legs in separate accidents Friday and another horse had to be killed when it broke two legs in a two-wagon smashup Wednesday.

The hectic pace of the week-long stampede began to ease today. Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who arrived in Calgary Friday, is scheduled to present championship trophies to winning bronco riders, calf-ropers and wagon racers at closing ceremonies tonight.

Attendance at the wild west show has surpassed the five-day record turnout of last year's stampede. A total of 93,698 persons crowded through the gates Friday, more than 12,000 better than on the same day in 1956, to put over-all attendance 5,836 ahead of last year's 425,034 total for five days.

EQUINE CASUALTIES

Canadian Markets In Dull Sessions

By RON ANDREWS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets this week failed to match the rises and declines of Wall Street and once again rambled through dull and slow sessions.

While the U.S. market was rising and falling from day to day, Canadian investors continued to trade with extreme caution, just as they have done for most of this year.

A few mines and oils fell prey to profit taking and plain selling but other than these, there were few prominent price changes on the Canadian boards.

A number of factors have forced traders to remain on the sidelines. The recent trend of base metal prices, the decline in off-shore demand for crude oil, the change in overall construction activity, moderate oil supplies of newsprint and continued unfavorable balance of trade have all contributed to the slow and dreary activity.

The pattern of trading has been duplicated week after week. This is apparent on the Toronto Stock Exchange where this week's volume of 15,414,000 shares was exactly the same as two weeks ago.

Nickel stocks encountered brisk selling in mid-week following a rejection by the United States government to the International Nickel proposal that it at ready to take nickel after the new Manitoba facilities begin to produce.

Inco had proposed that the U.S. agree to take up to 150,000 pounds of nickel over a two-year period if the supply couldn't be sold privately. The U.S. government said it wasn't worried about nickel supplies since INCO was practically guaranteeing an end to shortages.

INCO lost $2.75 on the week and closed at $97.25. Nickel Rim was down 40 cents to $2.75 while Falconbridge lost $2 at $33. East Sullivan was a 75 cent loser and closed at a new low of $2.90.

Consolidated Salsbury, which was considering postponing its opening of production this August, lost 56 cents at $1.14. Amid active trading, it touched a low of $1.05 Thursday.

Several western oils were sold off and losses ranging to 65 cents were spotted across the board. A few issues bucked the trend. Fargo climbed $1 at $8.40 and Cree added 60 cents at $5.90. Jupiter was up 40 cents at $2.85.

The industrial list had nothing to offer in the way of noticeable price changes except for International Utilities, which climbed $6.75 to $68. Other changes were generally less than $2.

Index changes at Toronto: Industrials off 1.17 to 483.85; golds off 1.05 to 80.09; base metals off 3.55 to 194.53; western oils up .24 to 188.43. Of 860 issues traded, 42 declined, 234 advanced and 174 were unchanged.

Index changes at Montreal: Banks up 0.03 to 32.80; utilities off 2.7 to 132.5; industrials off 0.9 to 291.8; combined off 0.5 to 243.4; papers off 17.81 to 1251.72; golds off 1.40 to $7.06.

Week's volumes: 629,576 shares compared with 584,023 industrials and 1,545,982 issues the previous week. Of 402 issues traded, 104 advanced, 167 declined and 131 were unchanged.

Bank sales: 2,550,000.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By DINAH KERR
and IRVING STRICKLAND

Question: "What is your opinion of B.C. historian Bruce McKelvie's suggestion that there is a sufficient number of statues of Sir James Douglas around and the school children should contribute to a statue of a typical school 'marm' for the centennial year?"

Art McKilligan, foreman, $200 Tyndall Avenue: "I think the money could be used for something far more useful than a statue of anything. What's the point in building statues?"

McKiligan Gnap

Victor Gnap, mechanic, 749 Daffodil: "I don't think they should contribute to either statue. If the government wants a statue, let them pay for it. The idea is ridiculous."

Scott Faderberg

Mrs. R. Scott, 966 Bank Street: "That's a good idea. School children would probably be much more interested in a statue of a teacher than of anything else."

Miss Elsa Faderberg, 4347 Wilkings: "At least it's a better idea than a statue of Sir James Douglas. But I'd like to know what they would consider a typical 'school marm.' Would she represent B.C. teachers as they are now or as they were in 1858?"

Thorburn Michell

Bob Thorburn, service manager, 2117 Shelbourne: "There are enough statues around. The money should be used to renew historical sites, like the old fort at Rodd Hill. Why don't we do something that would attract tourists here?"

Mrs. Bud Michell, Saanichton: "I'd far sooner see the money spent on a children's hospital or a solarium. A statue's alright but all that money should be put towards a project that the children would benefit from."

Diesel Probe Ends Hearings; Europe Next

VANCOUVER (CP)—The three-man Kellogg royal commission investigating need for firemen on Canadian Pacific Railway diesel locomotives in freight and yard work, leaves here Sunday after completing its evidence-taking across Canada.

The commission, which has heard 2,500,000 words of testimony since its hearings opened four months ago, will stop briefly at Nelson, B.C., to examine payment of differentials to CPR crews on mountain and valley runs, another subject it is investigating.

It is also studying the basis of payment to firemen for locomotive inspection before and after runs.

The commission, set up Jan. 17 after a nine-day CPR strike across Canada, is expected to report its findings at the end of the year.

Mr. Justice Roy L. Kellogg said it would probably sit again in Ottawa Oct. 15 to hear refuting evidence and final argument.

Meanwhile, he and the commissioners, Chief Justice Campbell C. McLaurin of the Alberta Supreme Court trial division and Mr. Justice Martineau of the Quebec Court of Queen's Bench will make a four-week inspection of European railroads.

The commission's decision on the need for firemen in a diesel locomotive is expected to set the pattern for other North American lines.

TRIED TO KILL

Buckell Convicted In Bizarre Holdup

VANCOUVER (CP)—John William Buckell, who bungled a weird and bizarre bank robbery, was found guilty Friday of intending to wound and attempting to kill a bank accountant and policeman.

Sentence will be passed July 23 by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson. Buckell, 43, unfolded an elaborate plan for the holdup of the main branch of the Royal Bank of Canada March 15 so that he might be shot and killed by police to end his financial troubles.

A psychiatrist called in his defence said he diagnosed Buckell—a one-time cost accountant with an IQ of 140—as a psychoneurotic with chronic anxiety neurosis.

Buckell, pleaded not guilty to the charges of intending to wound and attempting to kill accountant Ronald Compston and Constable Kenneth Miles and another charge of assault with intent to steal. No money was taken.

A woman's cry echoed through the Assize Court room when prosecutor W. A. Schultz, in his charge to the jury, accused Buckell of dishonesty in telling his girl friend he was divorced.

Heads turned in the direction of the fashionably-dressed Miss Vivian Greaves, 19, who had been identified as the girl friend. She sat in the public gallery, her face buried in her hands.

Mr. Schultz said: "At the age of 40, he falls in love with a girl of 16 and deceives her into thinking he has received a divorce."

In his testimony, Buckell said he had left the girl $10,000 in his will. Buckell had $72,000 in insurance. The other $62,000 was to go to his wife and son. Buckell said his wife had hallucinations and now is in a mental home.

Mr. Schultz described Buckell's "self-destruction plan" as a scheme to defraud.

FULTON HASN'T HEARD OF NEW NORMAN DATA

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Fulton said Friday he knows of no new "secret intelligence report" from Cairo respecting Herbert Norman, Canadian ambassador to Egypt who committed suicide in Cairo last April.

Mr. Fulton was commenting on Washington reports, not carried by The Canadian Press, that a "secret intelligence report" said Norman jumped from a Cairo building because he anticipated a new loyalty check that would have forced him to involve many other Canadian and U.S. officials.

ARCHAEOLOGIST LOOKS TO FUTURE ...

Victoria May Rival Old Glory of Greece

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Centuries from now archaeologists will dig for the remains of old buildings in Victoria just as today they are plumbing the ruins of ancient Athens for evidence of a once-powerful civilization.

"But I hope Victoria will have a much longer life than Athens," says Dr. Homer Thompson, one of the world's leading archaeologists and, at 50, one of the pleasantest pedagogues it is possible to meet.

In Victoria today, Dr. Thompson is an inspiring figure of Canadian scholarship—a Chilliwack boy whose love of ancient Greece has made him a world authority on his subject.

With his wife and twin daughters, Hilary and Hope, he is now visiting his aunt, Mrs. Evan McQueen, at 973 Falkland Road. He last came to Victoria in 1949.

From the University of British Columbia his quest for knowledge took him to the leading universities of North America and to Athens, where he began excavating in 1931. Last month he turned over to the Greek government a monumental piece of history—a reconstruction of the Stoa of King Attalos as it appeared a century before Christ.

The job of reconstruction took five years and cost almost $2,000,000, half of it contributed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

What is a stoa? Dr. Thompson described it as the most characteristic public building in ancient Greece—a long shed-like structure almost resembling a modern railway station and built entirely of marble and stone.

The greatest philosophers of the age taught in these buildings—St. Paul, Socrates, Zeno, Diogenes and others.

DR. HOMER THOMPSON ... "One day Victoria will be ancient."

'Chain Stoas' in Ancient Greece

The Stoa of Attalos, built in 150 B.C., stood in the centre of Athens bordering the market place and St. Paul preached within its walls.

"It was the type of building that Socrates used centuries before—before he was put to death by poisoning in 399 B.C."

Dr. Thompson recalls that not long ago a woman tourist approached him in Athens and said: "Tell me, Doctor, did they have Super Markets in ancient Greece?"

"No madam," he replied, "but it would be quite accurate to say they had Chain Stoas."

Re-creation of the Stoa of Attalos dates from a day, in 1948 when a woman archaeologist jokingly suggested that Dr. Thompson should reconstruct it as a public museum.

The Canadian scholar took her seriously and from then on all his knowledge and industry were focussed on what he regarded as his greatest challenge.

King Gave Generously to Education

Dr. Thompson finds a modern corollary in the fact that King Attalos gave generously in gratitude for the knowledge he had gained there.

"In the same fashion today men give to the University of British Columbia in return for what it has given them."

Dr. Thompson says his work in Athens is far from complete. There is a corollary task of writing and publishing, at an estimated cost of $200,000, some 20 volumes covering 25 years of research by the American School of Classical Studies in Athens.

Dr. Thompson and his wife, Dorothy—a fellow archaeologist—will write perhaps a third of this work.

The American school is supported by 75 universities in Canada and the U.S. including UBC and the University of Toronto.

"UBC is interested very directly," the doctor said, "and this summer we had a visit from Miss Ann Sutherland of the department of classics."

"She was impressed by the fact that, fundamentally, the people who live in Athens today are much like the people of Socrates' time."

All students who have taken a B.A. degree in ancient history or classics at North American universities are eligible to attend the school in Athens, which receives an average of 15 new students every year and normally houses at least 30.

He tried to say he didn't think he would be able to make it to court that day, but the case had already been set over and he was waved from the defendant's stand.

MUTTERED

Leaving the courtroom he muttered in a derogatory tone and before he had taken two steps Magistrate A. I. Thomas leaned forward demanding, "What was that? What was that?"

"What did you say?" echoed Cons. William McKenzie as he stepped forward.

"Put him in the lockup," said the magistrate.

"You're under arrest," said the constable.

"What for?" said Carlow, as he was marched away between two constables.

He was remanded in custody until Wednesday.

In city police court today, Carlow pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving without licence plates and was remanded to Monday for trial.

He was brought from custody to face the charge, dating back to 1956, and bail was set at $25 cash. However, he will remain in custody for the RCMP.

Paul G. Cook, RCN, was remanded for election of trial to Monday in city police court.

Carson claims he was beaten and robbed of $110 by three young men. Previously charged was Donald Quate, Victoria millworker.

Victoria Kiwanis Club Tuesday will be entertained by members of Eaton's music department. D. Fairne, Tom Austin and Reg Stone will alternate with selections on two Hammond organs.

Raven 'Jo-Jo' Goes AWOL He's Social Type of Bird

"Jo-Jo" the raven, has gone missing.

He's the property of Provincial Museum employee and bird lover, Frank Beebe, 4146 Grange, and Mr. Beebe is perturbed about his bird as "he's so utterly tame," and could presumably suffer harm at the hands of persons who do not know Jo-Jo.

Jo-Jo has never had his wings clipped, and has been flying from the Beebe home in the Colquitz area at his own discretion. He's full grown, twice the size of a crow, and doesn't talk.

He's readily identifiable: two of his hind claws are missing. Mr. Beebe said he was alarmed that children may have found Jo-Jo, who is a social type of bird, and while he's sure the youngsters would treat him all right, he'd like to have Jo-Jo home again.

U.S. Deportation Order Fought by Ex-Victorian

By PETER MURRAY

The plight of a 60-year-old woman, born in Victoria, who is threatened with separation from her family and friends in the U.S. was brought to light today.

Mrs. Hazel Anna Wolf has lived in the U.S. for the last 40 years.

Because she is alleged to have been a member of the Communist party there some 20 years ago, the government has ordered her deported.

John Caughlan, a Seattle attorney with whom Mrs. Wolf has worked for a number of years and who is helping her fight the case, said today the deportation order is "terribly unjust and most cruel."

BANISHMENT

"To remove her from this country now is just plain banishment, which was abolished in the middle ages," Mr. Caughlan told the Times in a telephone interview.

Mrs. Wolf's case has been taken up by the Washington Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, which has appealed to the public to write to U.S. Attorney-General Herbert Brownell in protest.

These are the circumstances of the unusual case: Mrs. Wolf was born in Victoria of an American mother and Canadian father.

She married a Canadian here and had a daughter. At the age of 21 Mrs. Wolf moved to the U.S. with her child. The husband is now dead.

In 1952 the U.S. government ordered her deported under the McCarran Act on the grounds that she had belonged to the Communist party in 1938 and 1939.

GOOD REPUTATION

In the meantime Mrs. Wolf had raised her child and established a good reputation in the community.

During the war she did volunteer work for the U.S. government and received a citation for outstanding service signed by former president, Harry Truman.

Mrs. Wolf now has five grandchildren and all her friends and family, including a brother and sister, are living in the U.S. She has no connections left with Canada.

Since 1952 the case has been before the courts.

Mr. Caughlan attempted to take it before the Supreme Court but was turned down.

Her last chance now appears to be "discretionary relief," by the attorney-general.

And time is running out for Mrs. Wolf.

deportation is expected daily," said Mrs. Marion Kinney, executive secretary of the committee.

"Mrs. Wolf has now exhausted all legal recourse, and her deportation is imminent, unless public pressure from at home and abroad is mobilized to prevent this deportation," Mrs. Kinney said in a letter to the Times.

"She has been an asset to our community in every sense, as has been attested to by her character references; employers and others with whom she has been associated have made affidavits testifying to her abilities and reliability."

Mr. Caughlan said Mrs. Wolf has been his secretary for six years and he had found her to be of excellent character and intelligent.

She has been convicted of no crimes.

FAST AFFILIATION

The deportation order is based solely on a past political affiliation.

Mrs. Wolf has never publicly admitted being a dues-paying member of the Communist party.

If she had been an American citizen she could not be arrested because the party was legal at that time. This privilege is not extended to foreigners, however.

Mr. Caughlan said another aspect under consideration is the possibility Mrs. Wolf may be able to claim dual citizenship under a 1952 U.S. amendment.

If this was established by a court, deportation might be averted.

Up to this time, however, the government and courts have turned down all appeals.

At a meeting Friday night the men voted to back up the unanimous recommendation of a conciliation board. The award has been rejected by this area's four major milk distributors.

In a separate vote the milkmen voted 95 per cent for continuance of the present six-day a week delivery plan, as recommended by the board.

Previously the drivers, members of the Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employees' Union, local 464, had suggested a skip-a-day delivery plan as a means of reducing cost to enable a $30 monthly raise.

The board approved this wage demand without recommending curtailment of deliveries.

The operators, who had urged a five-day delivery plan, said they could not grant the raise without curtailing deliveries.

EXPRESSION OF FAITH

'Everlasting' House Built for Eternity

ALCOA, Tenn. (AP)—William Andrew Nicholson is an 80-year-old carpenter who built an everlasting home because he confidently expects to live forever.

It is a fortress-like stone dwelling of 14 rooms and was hand-built by Nicholson and his wife over an eight-year period. It is known locally as "Millennium Manor."

"It cannot rust or rot," said Nicholson, whose keen blue eyes and white hair make him look like a patriarch in a striped sport shirt.

Nicholson is serenely certain that a million years from now he will be happy, alive and content with his house and lot.

His reason is simple. He accepts as a statement of literal fact the Biblical promise that whosoever loves Christ will have everlasting life.

ACCENT ON LIFE
"I believe in the Bible, and I believe in life," he said. "I believe in preparing to live instead of preparing to die."

So it was that in 1933, the carpenter and his wife, who discuss "The Master Calls for You."

YOU SAID TO ME—

By ETHEL TULL
A Sunday message of help and comfort for those puzzled, depressed or low in spirit.

You said to me, "Do children really understand about listening to God and following His guidance?"

In my last writing, I quoted some thoughts from an essay written by a child of 12 years of age on the subject of "Faith, Hope and Charity," but I would like to tell you about a delightful experience we have had with a family of father and mother and three children aged 13, 12, and 9 (two boys and a girl) with whom we lived for two weeks in a very small house.

Every morning, we all gathered in the living room for a family quiet time. Each of us had a notebook in which to write down the thoughts that came into our minds while listening to God, so that we should not forget to act upon them.

We remembered that no thought coming from Him could be otherwise than absolutely honest, pure, unselfish and loving. When everybody was ready, we shared our thoughts with each other, so that we could help one another to live up to them.

The Holy Spirit, who Jesus said would teach us all things, was impressing on the minds of the children thoughts of thankfulness for the lovely weather, for the picnic yesterday, for meeting new people.

Isn't the answer to juvenile delinquency an atmosphere of perfect trust between parents and children in which the young may develop, an abetment all the family and God?

Province Mining Industry Protests Proposed U.S. Tax

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines has made a final attempt to get the United States to reconsider its proposed new import tax on lead and zinc.

Chamber manager Tom Elliott said Thursday he has sent an urgent wire to Acting Prime Minister Howard Green asking that the government make a strong representation against the proposed tax.

The chamber of mines has received acknowledgement of its telegram, he said.

Mr. Elliott said the wire stated, in part, that the "base metal mining industry in this section of Canada is very concerned" about the proposed tax and that "many important communities in B.C. and the Yukon Territory owe their existence to mining these ores and are already in an unfavorable position owing to low world prices now prevailing and unfavorable exchange rate."

CLOSED BY COMMUNIST REGIME IN 1952

Young Englishmen Plan Attempt To Revive Red China Newspaper

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Two young men will brave the rigors of the Communist regime in an attempt to revive the North China Daily News, which was closed down in 1952 after the Communists took over Shanghai.

They are 24-year-old Tim Morris and his friend, Michael Rothwell, 25, both now staying in Victoria.

The North China Daily News, founded by Tim's grandfather more than 100 years ago, was closed down when his father, Gordon Morris, found it impossible to operate under the Communist regime.

Gordon Morris returned with his family to England where Tim attended the Stowe School in Buckinghamshire.

Now Tim is on his way back to China with the hope of reviving the paper his father and grandfather made famous.

FREE CAPITAL

"It will be a tricky job" Tim said. "It's a matter of freeing the capital Dad left in a bank in Shanghai and putting the old plant to work again."

"I believe it can be done, but of course we shall have to tread warily and not offend the present rulers of China."

Tim and his family were interned by the Japanese when they overran China during the last war. After liberation, they returned to England via Vancouver and it was then that Tim became enamored of British Columbia.

"I was only a youngster," he said, "but I felt sure I would return here some day."

He met Michael Rothwell in London four years ago and it was then that they first discussed plans for reviving the North China Daily News.

FATHER IN FAVOR

"Naturally I consulted my father. He was all in favor of the idea, though he would not attempt it himself. He knows the Communists would not accept him, since he is old enough to be regarded as settled in his beliefs."

"As I am still a young man, they may consider me pliable enough to work under the new regime, and I intend to return there with an open mind."

Both Tim and Michael are confident the U.S. trade ban on Red China will be lifted within the next few months and they envisage considerable trade between China and the free world as a result.

BUSINESS AGENT

"With that in mind, we are appointing a business agent in Vancouver who will look out for export and import trade in Canada and undertake business negotiations for us."

"This means, of course, that we shall not confine ourselves entirely to newspaper publishing, but in our business negotiations we should be able to get some extra advertising for the paper."

Michael Rothwell, who served in Malaya for two years with the 12th Lancers, believes he can play a useful part in the rebirth of this old established newspaper whose daily circulation once extended over a huge area.

"I know something of the Chinese people and I have always felt that sooner or later China would have to resume trading relations with the free world."

Tim and Michael will go first to Hong Kong to open negotiations with the Chinese government for permission to reopen the paper.

RELEASE FUNDS

Then, if their application is successful, they will proceed to Shanghai to arrange for the release of funds which have been frozen in a Chinese bank for the past five years.

Tim and Michael plan to recruit staff for the paper in Hong Kong and Singapore. Later, they hope to resume the former practice of hiring staff from white countries, including England and Canada.

"Before the war my father built up quite an international staff. He also trained a number of Chinese journalists and put out a separate Chinese edition printed in Chinese characters."

"He is a journalist of the old school who takes an idealistic view of publishing. He has no use for much of the frivolity and sensationalism that characterizes some sections of the British press today."

Both these enterprising young men expect to find life in Red China a lot more austere than it was in pre-war days. They are well aware that the era of plush living in exclusive white men's clubs, with drinks on the veranda have gone for ever. They are resigned to a life of industry and sustained effort under a new regime which will require all their ingenuity and diplomacy.

While in Victoria they plan to call on R. W. Davis, a former editor of the North China Daily News, who is living in retirement at 2727 Dunlevy.

SECTION COMPLETED IN B.C. GAS PIPELINE

COQUILHALLA, B.C. (CP) — The 110-mile southernmost section of Westcoast Transmission's $170,000,000 natural gas pipeline became a solid stretch of pipe Friday with the final weld being performed 4,500 feet above sea level.

The entire 650-mile-long pipeline, divided into four sections for construction purposes, is expected to be completed in August. Still to be finished are about a dozen miles in central B.C.

The pipeline, which was started early in 1955, will transmit natural gas from the field at Fort St. John, B.C., to the lower B.C. mainland and by a subsidiary line to 40 interior B.C. centres.

CARS FOR COFFEE

Cuba-Canada Trade Deal Grows

HAVANA, Cuba (UP) — Cuba is importing six-cylinder Pontiacs from Canada and Canada in turn is beginning to buy Cuban coffee — these are two of the novel twists in the ever brightening Cuban-Canadian trade picture.

The importation of Canadian cars into Cuba is not quite as startling as it may sound to many Americans who know that U.S.-made autos sell widely both north and south of the border.

The cars are actually General Motors products, but manufactured in Canadian plants.

GM has consigned the manufacture of six-cylinder Pontiacs for export to its Canadian factories.

Regardless, it is still the first time that such Canadian-made goods have appeared on the Cuban market.

The appearance of Cuban coffee on the Canadian market, on the other hand, signals a small but significant challenge to Canada's heretofore big coffee suppliers — Brazil and Colombia.

In 1956, these two large South American nations supplied Canada with close to $64 million worth of coffee. The Cuban contribution was much smaller at $6,000. Previously, however, Canada had made no purchases of Cuban coffee.

Cuban-Canadian trade has increased slightly in dollar value in recent years if not so much in volume, according to George A. Browne, commercial attaché at the Canadian Embassy in Havana.

The fact that Cuban-Canadian trade has not grown faster than it has is due, in part, he said, to the close Cuban trade ties with the United States.

It's a growing market and apparently unaffected by the fact there is no "R" in July.

"That is because these crabs are trapped in eight or 10 fathoms," explained one merchant, Larry Sutherland. Weather has little effect on crabmeat at that depth.

Crabs now being sold, range in weight from one to three pounds and are of the Dungeness hard-shelled variety.

Caught and cooked immediately, they can be picked from the ice and the tender leg meat sucked on the spot from the shells. Scientific diggers of 1,000 years hence will be puzzled by the finding of large quantities of crab shells along the routes of our highways.

Crabs have been fished commercially in B.C. since 1880 on the lower island, Burrard Inlet and near Prince Rupert. In 1954, last year counted 5,138, 000 pounds of crab were taken from B.C. waters.

Market value of crabs last year was highest of B.C. shell fish products. Most are marketed in Canada due to prohibitive U.S. duties.

Investigation shows female crabs rarely reach the legal size of six-and-a-half inches, which means the fishery is limited mostly to male crabs.

It is suspected this is what makes them crabby.

U.S. Roll-Back In Oil Prices Feature of Week

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK (AP) — Good in some spots, not so good in others — that was the complexion of U.S. business this week.

In a few instances, what was good news for some folks was bad news for others. Outstanding example: the roll-back in oil prices. Definitely on the bright side were reports of a record boom in summer employment, a whirlwind rise in stock prices, and faint whisperings of improved demand for houses, furniture, apparel, TV sets, and cars.

A poll of bankers found these traditionally cautious individuals outwardly confident of continued prosperity.

Some observers were less optimistic. Widely echoed was one prediction that business in the third quarter, which started last week, would experience a more-than-seasonal slowdown.

SALES HOLD UP

While store sales continued to hold up well (department store business in the week ended July 6 was four per cent ahead of last year), merchants continued to complain of rising costs.

The defence boom suffered a setback this week when the air force flagged down its Navaho guided missiles project. North American Aviation Inc., the prime contractor, said the halting of work on this project would force the company to lay off 10,000 workers at its California plants.

Contracts totalling more than $100,000,000 will be cancelled.

Unanswered at week's end was the question whether some of the urgency had been taken from the defence program as a result of the London disarmament talks and at the political shakeup in the Kremlin.

What's happening to oil prices? Last month, after granting refinery workers a six per cent boost in pay, moving oil companies announced a round of price increases on home and industrial heating oils, diesel fuel and gasoline.

FRONT WEAKENED

This week the oil price front weakened. Esso Standard Oil Co., eastern marketing affiliate of the huge Standard Oil Co. (N.J.), slashed prices of its home heating and diesel fuels by amounts ranging up to four-tenths of a cent a gallon, in many cases more than wiping out the June increase. As for the gasoline price rise, many suppliers were quietly granting discounts to filling station operators.

There were signs, too, of growing resistance to the July 1 rise in steel prices.

CAR CRASH KILLS NAVAL MAN

FINAL ★ ★ ★ ★ BULLETINS

Russian Batters World Jump Mark

LONDON (AP)—Yury Stepanov of Russia bettered the world high jump record with a leap of 2.16 metres (seven feet one inch), Moscow radio reported today.

Ontario Youths Die on Highway

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (BUP)—Two Sault Ste. Marie youths were killed and two others seriously injured early today when the car in which they were riding plowed into the rear of a truck carrying race horses.

One Killed in Bridge Collapse

CROSSETT, Ark. (AP)—A railroad bridge 10 miles north of here collapsed today, hurtling freight cars and wreckage on about 10 persons who were fishing in the river below.

Shah Rushes to Aid of Victims

TEHRAN, Iran (UP)—The Shah of Iran came home today to take personal charge of relief work in an earthquake stricken country where tremors still tumbled adobe walls. The shah flew back from a European vacation and immediately took control over relief operations for victims of earthquakes that killed 2,000, injured 5,000 and left tens of thousands homeless.

Weather Foils Hunt for Plane

VAL D'OR, Que. (BUP)—Bad weather forced the cancellation today of a search for a twin-engine survey plane with four men aboard that disappeared in the wilderness of northern Quebec 10 days ago. Four RCAF planes went up today but were called back because of a low ceiling and poor visibility.

Zhukov to Take Naval Salute

LONDON (UP)—Marshal Georgi Zhukov, a new power in the Kremlin hierarchy, arrived in Leningrad today to preside over celebrations marking Soviet Naval Day Sunday. Zhukov apparently will take the salute in place of Soviet Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev and Premier Nikolai Bulganin who are presently touring Czechoslovakia.

Soviet Troops Said Moving Into Slovakia

VIENNA (Reuters)—Strong rumors were current in Budapest today that during the last 10 days there has been a considerable movement of Russian troops from Hungary to Czechoslovakia.

It was believed that these movements had something to do with the visit of Russian leaders Nikita Khrushchev and Nikolai Bulganin to Czechoslovakia.

Travellers reaching Vienna from Budapest said there was no official confirmation of the rumors. But villagers in Komarom reported having seen Russian troops crossing into Czechoslovakia there last week.

Railroad tickets to Czechoslovakia have not been sold by the Hungarian state travel agency for the last week and no visas for Czechoslovakia have been issued.

Khrushchev and Bulganin have been on a tour of the Czech hinterlands for the last few days urging dissident Slovaks to work in closer harmony with the Communist regime.

No Western reporters were permitted on the three-day trip aimed at soothing restive elements in the province of Slovakia which have been demanding autonomy within the Czech state—a status they had during the German occupation.

The predominantly Roman Catholic Slovaks have made no secret of their bitterness against the Czechs who control the country and monopolize the government jobs.

Prague radio reported the arrival of Khrushchev and Bulganin in Bratislava Friday and said Khrushchev called on the Slovaks to "recognize the brotherly aid of the Czechs."

"Slovakia was a poor country and ranked among the most backward in Europe, forcing many Slovaks to leave their homes in order to seek their bread abroad," the Soviet Communist party chief said.

'GONE FISHING' SIGN HUNG UP BY JOHN D.

OTTAWA (CP)—Summer holidays appear to be almost entirely out of the picture for the new Progressive Conservative cabinet.

A canvass of ministers' offices shows that, except for Prime Minister Diefenbaker, none of the cabinet has any holiday plans.

Diefenbaker, in Calgary today to attend the stampede, will have nine days of rest at his Prince Albert, Sask., home and at a fishing camp at Lac la Ronge in northern Saskatchewan.

It will provide his first extended period of relaxation in six months of strenuous activity.

PATTERSON EASILY, SAYS O'BRIEN

It will be Floyd Patterson in seven rounds when he tangles with Hurricane Jackson in the heavyweight championship fight, says Weekend Magazine's sports editor Andy O'Brien in this issue.

Heavy Rain Toll Rises In Chicago

CHICAGO (UP)—Chicago area residents counted up a heavy toll of property damage and a rising death list today from over a half-foot of rain.

More showers were forecast for the waterlogged area. Deaths from accidents resulting from Friday night's torrential downpour rose to five and possibly six in the area, extending to suburbs north, south and west.

A seven-month-old baby drowned in her south-side basement apartment. A news vendor, 60, was found drowned in his apartment, also in a basement.

Overworked police and firemen struggled to clear roads of stalled vehicles. Some roads and highways were under water throughout the night.

Illinois Bell Telephone reported 20,000 phones out of commission in Chicago and 2,000 out in the suburbs.

Telephone company officials estimate $3,000,000 damage to equipment. Most of the damage came at midway airport where a bay "tidal wave" surged into the telephone equipment room in the basement of the terminal building.

Water was said to have been eight feet deep. Pumps labored all night, but only managed to keep even with the rising waters.

Civil Service Group Queries Agreement

VANCOUVER (CP)—The agreement which averted a strike of British Columbia's 12,000 civil servants has raised protests from some members of the B.C. Government Employees' Association.

About 2,000 employees at Esson and Woodlands School are querying a few of the points which Premier Bennett and the association agreed on Wednesday.

They have hired the Queen's Park Arena at New Westminster to hear "explanations" by association leaders.

Alfred Bennett, BCGEA assistant secretary, said Friday night a group of members was "apparently a little concerned about the retroactive pay clause, and about the fact that the government is not prepared to pay any more money right away."

The association's original demands were that any increase should be retroactive to April 1, but the government insisted on July 1. The association also wanted the 7½ per cent increase to be granted immediately, but the government said it must be approved by the legislature.

"Those weren't big enough issues on which to call a strike," said Mr. Bennett.

DEATH TRUCK MANGLED

Royal Canadian Navy truck written off as total loss was wrecked near Langford early today, killing driver PO Roy Bernard Drysdale, Vancouver recruiting officer who was on his way home. Police said Trans-Canada Highway was dry at the time and could offer no explanation for the accident.

Dulles Talk 'Vital' Says Diefenbaker

CALGARY (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said today there are some matters of "paramount importance" he will discuss with U.S. State Secretary Dulles when they meet in Ottawa July 27-28.

However, Mr. Diefenbaker told a press conference, the subjects for the informal discussions will be determined later this month.

Asked whether he will be seeing President Eisenhower later this year, he replied, "The only knowledge I have is what I read in the newspapers."

He indicated he plans no immediate action in connection with Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Limited and said the question of cash advances on farm-stored grain will receive most earnest consideration at an early date.

Hanna Refuses Job at Kamloops

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—George Christian Hanna, 23-year-old man without a country, has refused a job offered him here.

Immigration authorities here said he has left Kamloops but they refused to say where he has gone.

Hanna had gone to the interior after a brush with the law in Vancouver. He was arrested July 6 and charged with intoxication but did not appear, forfeiting his $10 bail.

VITAL U.S. TARGETS SMASHED

47 Million 'Ravaged' In Mock Air Attack

OPERATION ALERT (AP)—Officials estimated today that areas in which 95,521,526 persons—more than half the population of the United States—live were theoretically ravaged by mock "enemy" bombs in Operation Alert 1957.

At least 191 vital U.S. targets were smashed by a presumed enemy who swept across the North Pole Friday with super-sonic bombers carrying H-bombs.

The make-believe nuclear holocaust was a test of the nation's civil defence and mobilization organizations.

No official estimate of the number of "casualties" was planned, but presumably a major portion of the more than 95,000,000 in the test target areas would be dead or wounded in any real emergency.

Civil defence officials estimated 2,339,012 persons were "killed" and 2,281,238 "injured" when New York was struck by a hypothetical super bomb.

Sooke Loses Weather Luck For First Time

Clouds hung low, some rain fell, and weaklings stayed home, but a fair crowd of visitors with raincoats and umbrellas met at Sooke River flats this afternoon to help Sooke residents celebrate their annual All-Sooke Day.

Top attractions on the program were birling matches for the men's and women's world championships, loggers' sport, baby show for the Victoria Daily Times trophy, field sports and serving of traditional Sooke-style barbecued salmon and beef.

Sooke Community Association is sponsor of the celebration, now 21 years old, and seriously threatened by rain for the first time.

Rain insurance had been considered but rejected as "too expensive." (See pictures Page 15.)

Earthquake Recorded

NEW YORK (AP)—A "fairly strong" earth shock 4,200 miles from here was picked up Friday night on the Fordham University seismograph.

Canavan had been granted emergency leave from his Casper, Wyo. encampment.

Canavan's wife, Emilie, 19, had camp.

Federal-Provincial Conference In Fall Hinted by Diefenbaker

CALGARY (BUP)—Prime Minister John Diefenbaker hinted today at an early Dominion-provincial conference, presumably in advance of the fall session of parliament.

It raised the possibility of remedial legislation as part of the promised autumn budget of Finance Minister Donald Fleming.

Questioned at a press conference on his intentions with respect to a Dominion-provincial new deal, the prime minister replied that the matter was one which was receiving careful consideration and that an announcement could be expected "in the not too distant future."

Newsman interpreted the reply as heralding an early Dominion-provincial meeting in Ottawa, with the prospect that, if a new formula of taxation apportionment can be reached, legislative effect to it will be given to it in the budget.

The prime minister also gave the following thumbnail digest of his early intentions: —He hopes to complete his

Jet Pilot Wings Home To Kill Wife's Visitor

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—An air national guard pilot, who flew his F-80 jet fighter home from Wyoming to trap a man who had been annoying his wife, shot and killed an air force sergeant who entered the pilot's home Friday night.

Lieut. Leo J. Canavan, 21, sprang from his wife's bedroom after the sergeant, Donald Clark Ohmann, stationed at Tinker air force base, entered the living room. Canavan shot Ohmann four times with a .22 calibre pistol.

Canavan had been granted emergency leave from his Casper, Wyo. encampment.

Canavan's wife, Emilie, 19, had camp.

told her, husband and police that a man had called her at least 15 times on the telephone since her husband left for camp a week ago.

She said the caller had identified himself as Edward Douglas over the telephone and had told her he was "a good friend of your husband" and wanted to see her.

After the shooting, Ohmann ran down a drive and collapsed in the front yard. He was struck once in the head and three times in the back.

Police said no charges are planned against Canavan and he is expected to return to his air guard camp.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By DINAH KERR and IRVING STRICKLAND

Question: "What is your opinion of B.C. historian Bruce McKelvie's suggestion that there is a sufficient number of statues of Sir James Douglas around and the school children should contribute to a statue of a typical school 'marm' for the centennial year?"

Art McKilligan, foreman, 4306 Tyndall Avenue: "I think the money could be used for something far more useful than a statue of anything. What's the point in building statues?"

Victor Gnam, mechanic, 719 Daffodil: "I don't think they should contribute to either statue. If the government wants a statue, let them pay for it. The idea is ridiculous."

Mrs. R. Scott, 906 Bank Street: "That's a good idea. School children would probably be much more interested in a statue of a teacher than of anything else."

Miss Elsa Faderberg, 4347 Wilkison: "At least it's a better idea than a statue of Sir James Douglas but I'd like to know what they would consider a typical 'school marm.' Would she represent B.C. teachers as they are now or as they were in 1858?"

Bob Thorburn, service manager, 2717 Shelbourne: "There are enough statues around. The money should be used to renew historical sites, like the old fort at Rodd Hill. Why don't we do something that would attract tourists here?"

Mrs. Bud Michell, Saanichton: "I'd far sooner see the money spent on a children's hospital or solarium. A statue's alright but all that money should be put towards a project that the children would benefit from."

TRIED TO KILL
Buckell Convicted In Bizarre Holdup

VANCOUVER (CP)—John William Buckell, who bungled a weird and bizarre bank robbery, was found guilty Friday of intending to wound and attempting to kill a bank accountant and policeman.

Sentence will be passed July 23 by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson. Buckell, 43, unfolded an elaborate plan for the holdup of the main branch of the Royal Bank of Canada March 15 so that he might be shot and killed by police to end his financial troubles.

A psychiatrist called in his defence said he diagnosed Buckell—a one-time cost accountant with an IQ of 140—as a psychoneurotic with chronic anxiety neurosis.

Buckell pleaded not guilty to the charges of intending to wound and attempting to kill accountant Ronald Compton and Constable Kenneth Miles and another charge of assault with intent to steal. No money was taken.

A woman's cry echoed through the Assize Court room when prosecutor W. A. Schultz, in his charge to the jury, accused Buckell of dishonesty in telling his girl friend he was divorced.

Heads turned in the direction of the fashionably-dressed Miss Vivian Greaves, 19, who had been identified as the girl friend. She sat in the public gallery, her face buried in her hands.

Mr. Schultz said: "At the age of 40, he falls in love with a girl of 16 and deceives her into thinking he has received a divorce."

In his testimony, Buckell said he had left the girl $10,000 in his will. Buckell had $72,000 in insurance. The other $62,000 was to go to his wife and son. Buckell said his wife had hallucinations and now is in a mental home.

Mr. Schultz described Buckell's "self-destruction plan" as a scheme to defraud.

Called to Bar—George Rapanos, 26, a graduate of Victoria College, was called to the bar at Supreme Court Friday and sworn in as a lawyer. He left Victoria for Vancouver several years ago and now resides at 3290 Granville.

Diesel Probe Ends Hearings; Europe Next
VANCOUVER (CP)—The three-man Kellock royal commission investigating need for firemen on Canadian Pacific Railway diesel locomotives in freight and yard work, leaves here Sunday after completing its evidence-taking across Canada.

The commission, which has heard 2,500,000 words of testimony since its hearings opened four months ago, will stop briefly at Nelson, B.C., to examine payment of differentials to CPR crews on mountain and valley runs, another subject it is investigating.

It is also studying the basis of payment to firemen for locomotive inspection before and after runs.

The commission, set up Jan. 17 after a nine-day CPR strike across Canada, is expected to report its findings at the end of the year.

Mr. Justice Roy L. Kellock said it would probably sit again in Ottawa Oct. 15 to hear refuting evidence and final argument.

Meanwhile, he and the commissioners, Chief Justice Campbell C. McLaurin of the Alberta Supreme Court trial division and Mr. Justice Martineau of the Quebec Court of Queen's Bench will make a four-week inspection of European railroads.

The commission's decision on the need for firemen in a diesel locomotive is expected to set the pattern for other North American lines.

FULTON HASN'T HEARD OF NEW NORMAN DATA

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Fulton said Friday he knows of no new "secret intelligence report" from Cairo respecting Herbert Norman, Canadian ambassador to Egypt who committed suicide in Cairo last April.

Mr. Fulton was commenting on Washington reports, not carried by The Canadian Press, that a "secret intelligence report" said Norman jumped from a Cairo building because he anticipated a new loyalty check that would have forced him to involve many other Canadian and U.S. officials.
